A GLORIOUS CELEBRATION.

One of the Very Best McMinnville Has Ever Enjoyed.

The Fourth opened with threatening skies and falling mists in this city, but by eleven o'clock the clouds parted and the balance of the day was delightful.

The finest parade the city has ever had was formed at 11 o'clock and marched in the following order through the streets and to the grove:

1. Marshals Geo. Keen and F. H. Caldwell.
2. Lafayette band.
3. 21 marching veterans G. A. R.
4. Speaker in carriage.
5. Geo. and Martha Washington.
6. Liberty car with little girls representing states.
7. 26 young ladies on horseback.
8. A. O. U. W. float.
9. Beautifully decorated carriage of R. Jacobson and Co.
10. Horseless carriage pulled by Henry Fletcher's mules.
11. Woodmen float.
12. Fire company.
13. Float of Flynn & Co.
14. Trade display of Blacksmiths Ferguson & Fletcher.
15. Decorated Deering binder by Wade & Co.
16. Plug uglies.

At the grove Judge Bird presided and the following program was carried out:

Band music.
Prayer by Rev. A. A. Winters.
Recitation by Mrs. J. A. Young.
Reading of declaration of independence by Prof. S. S. Duncan.
Song, "The Blue and the Gray," by Hobbs-Patty quartette.
Mute recitation of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Miss Mina Murton.

Oration by Hon. W. D. Fenton. This was a superb effort. Mr. Fenton's handsome presence was a welcome feature to everybody and nearly everybody in this county knows him as a personal friend.
His oration was a keen analysis of the spirit of the revolutionary leaders, such as Patrick Henry, Samuel Adams, James Otis and Stephen Hopkins. From this he drifted into a noble eulogy for the common soldier, whose work he said would never be forgotten.

They live and have become immortal in the institutions their valor defended and in the civilization which they have given to us. For more than a century that glorious flag has kissed the summer sunshine or been torn in fragments by the winter storm. It has cheered brave soldiers on a hundred bloody battlefields, it has been to them a sign of victory and liberty.
While shot and shell rained upon the deck of our navy, or poured into forts held by our arms in every war, that flag has been an emblem of power, towards whose ample folds every eye has constantly turned. Today it floats alike over the graves of the illustrious dead whether buried in the consecrated battlefield of Gettysburg or in the bloody tomb of Shiloh. It was lifted as a symbol of liberty above the oppressed in Cuba and a reunited people north and south followed its victorious lead at Santiago. It has become the sign of liberty and freedom in the islands of the Pacific and it was present when Spanish power fell in the east. Has the struggle of all these years been in vain? Here and there a voice, like some bird of evil omen, croaks from its solemn retreat, a painful prophecy, and would have us believe that American patriotism has lost its intensity, that the fruits of the revolution have turned to ashes, and that the nation is tottering to its fall. We must not lose sight of first principles upon which the country was founded. If we are to remain free, if we are to keep our country, we must not forget that the struggle for independence was not for the sake of the individual, rich or poor, and have not the law-making bodies been responsive to the slightest infraction of any popular right? Is there any citizen in this great country today, who can justly complain of any denial of his right to liberty, security in his person or protection to his property? Has he not the absolute right to the pursuit of any lawful vocation, and is he anywhere denied access to courts of his own creation, to redress his wrongs?
Let us put the finger upon the violation of civil rights anywhere in the United States which receives recognition and approval by those in authority or a majority of the people. Whose property has been taken anywhere without just compensation? Whose right to labor and have the wages of his toil required to him, has been denied? What country is today doing more to uphold the blessed influences of the age than ours? Who has been driven from peaceful pursuits to the military prison, and what soldier wears the uniform of the United States that did not freely and of his own choice enter the army? What sailor has been impressed on any man-of-war belonging to our navy?
What citizen has given up his home that a hostile soldiery might be quartered there? Who of the eighty million people has felt the burden of a standing army, and what American farmer, mechanic or laborer has ever felt the weight of an American soldier on his shoulders? In works of education our age is unsurpassed. The children of the rich and poor alike enter the schools and on of their advantages. No man pays a tithe to any church, excepting upon his own volition, and yet no country has made such progress in the upbuilding of great religious universities, the wide extension of church agencies, and in the support and adornment of magnificent church buildings, temples and cathedrals. In all that goes to make up a great, contented, prosperous people we are abundantly blessed. We have come to the exalted place in the life of the nation not without great sacrifice and after many struggles. In the time, we have successfully fought two wars with Great Britain, one with Mexico, many Indian wars, the great civil war, the recent Spanish-American war, and we are now seeking to restore order, establish civil and religious liberty and our civilization in the Philippines. These contests appealed to the martial spirit and ended with credit to our arms. In each of these struggles some of our people did not share in the hopes and aspirations of the nation or support those who were charged with the maintenance of the people. But after the years have passed and the smoke of conflict has cleared away, these great events appear as epochs in the progress of the nation. We declared war against Spain something more than a year ago ostensibly and partly in the defense of national honor, and to avenge the shocking destruction of our battle ship and its sailors in Havana harbor, but the real cause is seen to have been the irrepressible conflict between the free institutions of America and the oppression of the Spaniard. We have promised to give to Cuba her independence when and as soon as her people have, in the judgment of freemen, demonstrated their capacity for self government, and by the time this period shall have arrived, the same capacity for and love of liberty that we possess and enjoy will annex by the voluntary suffrages of intelligent Cubans, that magnificent island to our country. We took the trophy of war Porto Rico and its inhabitants, and we have begun to plant American institutions in that garden of the Atlantic. We have added to our Pacific possessions Hawaii and given to its people a territorial form of government. In the destruction of Spanish power in the Philippines we are attempting to found a republican form of government and to take to the rebellious tribes tribes of these islands of the far western seas the same form of government, the same institutions and civilization which we ourselves enjoy. At this point in our national struggle there may be room for difference of opinion as to the ultimate disposition of these islands, but it is mainly because of the effect of their disposition upon us as a people and a nation whether for good or evil and not because our mission there will not bring untold blessings to their people. We have not violated the declaration of independence nor trampled upon the fundamental principles of free government in our temporary or permanent acquisition of this territory. The principles of civil liberty will flourish in our hands in the tropics as they have grown in this hemisphere. Before any question is made as to whether it is our duty to remain there and by force of arms, if we must, establish our authority, it might be well to ask whether our withdrawal would not be the establishment of a tyrant upon the ruins of Spanish power? A military leader who holds no commission from any government excepting one created by his own hand, who prates of the struggles of the American patriots at Valley Forge and in the same moment nerves an assassinate and strike down his greatest general, a despot who talks of freedom for his people at long range, and through Hong Kong junks, and who indiscriminately puts to the sword, without such as a military trial, peaceful natives of his own race, who have been non-combatants cannot receive from the United States any other treatment than that properly accorded to tyrants. It would be an offense against the age, against free institutions, against every consideration of humanity, to withdraw our forces and abandon these islands. We shall not do so.

The question does not admit of any debate on party lines. It should not now become a political issue. It has become one of national integrity. It is in no spirit of fault finding that we must take up this great question. The time may come after order has been restored, when the military shall have given place to the civil authority, when courts of justice shall have been established, when just and equal laws have been enacted and enforced, when our institutions have had their full sway in these islands, when it may be just and worthy of us to yield up our possession and control. That time, if it shall ever come, is far in the future. Meantime, we shall have many problems there and here to perplex us. We have as a nation entered upon a larger career, and we shall never return to the provincial life which has hitherto surrounded us. Theorists may debate, partisans may criticize and statesmen may condemn, but if there is one act that has become irrevocable, it is that by which the arbitrament of the sword gave to us control of the islands formerly owned by Spain. They are ours, and we must take care of them and their people. Nor is this result illogical or unexpected.
The people's pulse beat steadily in this direction.
There will be criticism and debate, there have been mistakes in detail and in plan, but over all and above all is the controlling and overwhelming thought, that this country has just begun its great career of usefulness, and that its institutions, its learning, its trade, its progress, and its people, shall rightfully enter upon these opportunities.

In the afternoon there was a pony and foot race, and after assembling on the ball grounds, the contest for the goose at the top of the greased pole was won by Gay Ferguson. Then followed the war dance by the Grand Ronde Indians, which served to kill time till the ball game was ready. This was the game of the season, and among the best ever played here. The McMinnville boys stood one score ahead when they played their last inning, but were unable to hold the advantage, and the Torpedoes reversed the honors, leaving the field with 8 scores to the home team's 7. This practically ended the attractions of the day, and everybody went home pleased.
