

RHEUMATISM

Is due to an acid poison which gains access to the blood through failure of the proper organs to carry off and keep the system clear of all morbid, effete matter. This poison through the general circulation is deposited in the joints, muscles and nerves, causing the most intense pain.

Rheumatism may attack with such suddenness and severity as to make within a few days a healthy, active person helpless and bed-ridden, with distorted limbs and shattered nerves; or it may be slow in developing, with slight wandering pains, just severe enough to make one feel uncomfortable; the tendency in such cases is to grow worse, and finally become chronic.

Like other blood diseases, Rheumatism is often inherited, and exposure to damp or cold, want of proper food, insufficient clothing, or anything calculated to impair the health, will frequently cause it to develop in early life, but more often not until middle age or later. In whatever form, whether acute or chronic, acquired or inherited, Rheumatism is Strictly a Blood Disease, and no liniment or other external treatment can reach the trouble. Neither do the preparations of potash and mercury, and the various mineral salts, which the doctors always prescribe, cure Rheumatism, but ruin the digestion and break down the constitution.

A remedy which builds up the general health and at the same time rids the system of the poison is the only safe and certain cure for Rheumatism. S. S. S., made of roots, herbs and barks of wonderful food, insufficient clothing, or anything calculated to impair the health, will frequently cause it to develop in early life, but more often not until middle age or later. In whatever form, whether acute or chronic, acquired or inherited, Rheumatism is Strictly a Blood Disease, and no liniment or other external treatment can reach the trouble. Neither do the preparations of potash and mercury, and the various mineral salts, which the doctors always prescribe, cure Rheumatism, but ruin the digestion and break down the constitution.

Mr. J. O. Malley, 125 W. 12th Street, Indianapolis, Ind., for eighteen months was so terribly afflicted with Rheumatism he was unable to feed or dress himself. Doctors said his case was hopeless. He had tried fifty-two prescriptions that friends had given him, without the slightest relief. A few bottles of S. S. S. cured him permanently, and he has never had a rheumatic pain since. This was five years ago.

We will send free our special book on Rheumatism, which should be in the hands of every sufferer from this torturing disease. Our physicians have made blood and skin diseases a life study, and will give you any information or advice wanted, so write them fully and freely about your case. How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

We understand that Z. T. This is a little bit the biggest thing in the way of a real estate deal that Yamhill has seen—and that in the grubby end, too. Dr. H. J. Littlefield returned home Monday evening from his extended Alaskan cruise on the United States revenue cutter Perry. He looks much better than when he left, having improved rapidly since about the first of July, gaining nearly twenty pounds in weight. He returned somewhat sooner than he had expected, but admits that he got homesick and had to come. He resigned his position at Sitka where he was fortunate in securing another physician to take his place. Our county seat is manifesting a commendable spirit of enterprise in arranging for a street fair and we see no reason why it may not be made a great success. In fact, if carried out along lines already suggested, it will be not only a street but a county fair, and will be a benefit, not only to McMinnville but to all Yamhill. Such things can easily be run into the ground, but Yamhill is certainly in no larger along that line, and all should cooperate in making the fair a success. Here's our hand and our vote—for carnal queen—when nominations are made.—Newberg Graphic.

Hen Stories Take the Place of Fish Stories.

W. W. Bailey, of Brownsville, takes objection to the Alsea hen which continued her work of incubating while the threshing machine in which she had hidden her nest was in operation, being styled the grittiest hen in America. He says he has a little Brown Leghorn hen which this summer stole a nest out by an old bed of the Calippooia river near his house, in a path of thick underbrush. Knowing a Leghorn's preference to a nest of her own choice, he "supplied her with fresh eggs during her temporary absence," and allowed her to proceed with her incubation business. The day her chickens were due, Mrs. Bailey visited the nest to see if she was all right, and discovered a polecat lying flat beside it with its head apparently under her, and the hen paying no attention to it. She was alarmed for the safety of the unhatched chickens, and also the hen, and as there was no dog and no man around she ran to her house for a revolver, and came back to biddie's assistance with the shooting iron and a long pole. She was afraid to shoot at the polecat while it was so close to the hen, for fear of killing her, and she did not care to take hold of or kick an animal having the unsavory reputation of the polecat. Hence the long pole was provided. Mrs. Bailey cocked the revolver, placed the pole under the polecat, and, closing her eyes, threw the animal into the air and discharged the revolver. She is a good shot with a revolver, especially when she has her eyes shut, but she was just a little surprised when she opened her eyes to find that the polecat was stone dead. Examination showed the little hen had defended her nest against the intruder the night before, and had pecked it to death. Next day she "came off" with eleven chickens, which are all alive and doing well. In view of the unparalleled courage displayed by both the hen and his wife, Mr. Bailey is truly proud of them both, and is of the opinion that when the title of "grittiest hen" or "grittiest woman" is bestowed, that honor should come to Brownsville.

A Tilt Between the Teachers.

Prof. Durette, of Portland, has been one of the favorite instructors at the teachers' institute now in session here, but he allowed himself to be treed one day when he was presenting the subject of civil government. He evidently thought he was running for county school superintendent in Multnomah county, and that the election had not been held, for he branched off on imperialism, saying that one of the political parties opposed the doctrine, leaving the impression that the other party advocated imperialism. This aroused Supt. Ackerman, who evidently thought it not professional, for he said a teacher was not employed to teach politics, but if he mentioned it at all he must impartially give both sides of the question. At an other time Prof. Durette stated the democratic contention on the trusts. The Prof. evidently forgot that he is not on the democratic ticket.—Hillsboro Independent.

What a Typhoid Patient's Blood Will Do. Experiment by Doctor's at Corvallis.

Doctors are frequently puzzled in diagnosing typhoid fever cases. Quite recently a test has been discovered. The credit of it belongs to a German physician. Unfortunately the patient must be sick several days before the test can be applied. It is therefore only valuable in confirming the theory that the attending physician has already set up.

It was applied the other day in Corvallis. The typhoid case was Mr. Pratt, relative of Prof. Pratt. In the test, the typhoid fever germs constantly kept on hand by Prof. Pernet in the bacteriological laboratory at the college, were utilized. These germs were secured by Prof. Pernet during his course of study in the bureau of animal industry at Washington last summer. The germs are kept in little glass tubes, and every month or six weeks they are replanted by the process known to bacteriologists.

With these germs a culture was made. That is, a number of them were put in bouillon, or in plain American language, a preparation of beef broth. There they developed, and became very, very small living creatures, visible only under the microscope. After they had been in there 24 hours a small quantity of the bouillon, containing the germs, was dropped on a piece of glass on which there was a drop of blood from the veins of the typhoid patient. The blood had previously been allowed to dry. The test in such cases hinges upon what the effect will be of the blood upon the germs. There is toxine or poison in the blood of the typhoid patient, that kills the germs. If the latter smile and kick up their heels at sight of the blood, the patient from whom the blood is taken is not suffering from typhoid fever. If, on the contrary, they all die, the reverse is true. In the case of Mr. Pratt, there was consternation among the germs when they came in contact with the blood. In a very brief space all of them were piled up in masses of dead and dying, establishing positively the character of the disease, and the correctness of the physician's diagnosis. The test was most interesting, and affords a glimpse of what science is doing in the world.—Times.

The Chinese Method.

A short time ago a man in this city met with an accident, in which his arm was injured. Blood poisoning set in, and the doctors advised amputation as the only means of saving the patient's life. After receiving the same recommendation from several doctors, he called on a Chinese physician, who undertook to save the arm. He dug a hole in the ground and in it buried a rooster, leaving only the head and neck above the ground. He treated the arm and told the patient that if the rooster lived three days the arm would be saved, but if the fowl died he was a gone sucker. The fowl lived, and the patient saved his arm and his life. He is not exactly clear as to the part the rooster played in the matter; neither is the rooster, but he is not worrying about that. To be alive and have both his arms is all he cares about.—Oregonian.

A Fourth of July celebration is to be held at Union park in Clackamas county on September 8th. The inclemency of the weather on Independence day thwarted their plans for their celebration and they concluded to postpone the affair until they had harvested all their crops.
