A Case of Oats.

The first case before J. M. Pugh, the new justice of the peace, was tried on Tuesday. E. L. Wing, the liveryman, sued Preston Lung, a farmer, to recover damages for failure to comply with a contract. Plaintiff's version of the contract was that 800 bushels of oats were to be delivered at 30c per bushel. Lung's version was, that of his oat crop, one-third should go to the landlord, 500 bushels he was to retain for feed and 200 bushels for seed, and as his entire crop was but little over 800 bushels, he was unable to fill the contract, and knowing this he brought back and deposited on Mr. Wing's knee the $10 which had been paid as earnest money. In the meantime the price of oats had risen to 34 and 36c. In a case of this kind, where the oath of plaintiff offsets the oath of defendant, the preponderance of evidence must be shown by plaintiff. This was accomplished by the testimony of Dr. Minty, who was present when the contract was made, and corroborated the plaintiff's version. Justice Pugh gave judgment for the plaintiff for $32, being the advance of 4c a bushel, and also for costs and disbursements. Plaintiff was represented by R. L. Conner, and defendant by Rhodes & Rhodes and J. J. Spencer.

Cook School Notes.

Vacation, that we were so glad to see last spring, is a thing of the past; and now we welcome school again with, if possible, greater pleasure than we did vacation.

Some of our students are still in the hop fields and we hope to see them next week.

Some new teachers greet us, and while we are sorry to lose our old ones we welcome the new and hope that we may get along with them as well as we did with the old. The opening exercises were an inspiration to us and show us that the board are doing all they can to make school as good as possible for us.

We notice that while we have been away the building has been put in good condition.

Mr. Peckham is our new janitor, and if the rooms are in as good condition every morning as they were this week, we shall feel that his name ought to be put on the roll of honor.

We are glad to see that one of our last year students is about to be elected queen of the carnival, and we will say that this is the place where you can find them.
