FRIDAY, OCT. 19, 1900.

"Let well enough alone" is the motto of a club of theatrical men formed in New York to work for the election of McKinley and Roosevelt. The amusement fraternity has no desire to return to the black days of depression that prevailed from 1893 to 1896.

The most perplexed man in Indiana is George Rogers of Richmond, who raises chickens for the market, and has over 300 of them. While feeding them the other day, one of the fowls nipped a $500 diamond from a ring on his finger, and then darted in among the other 299. George doesn't know which of the chickens gobbled his costly gem, and therefore he is deeply perplexed.

Candidate Bryan has been caught in the act of falsifying the treaty with the Sultan of Sulu, and the acting secretary of war has found it necessary to "call him down" for his deliberate or reckless distortion of facts. Instead of recognizing slavery the treaty expressly and distinctly prohibits it. The statement made by the candidate for the highest office in the gift of the people of the greatest nation on earth, who makes it for the purpose of trying to influence a few votes in his favor on account of the prejudices sought to be appealed to, is demagogical in the extreme.

The persistency with which a dishonest political assumption is adhered to is remarkable. An example of this is found in the repetition of the statement that Abraham Lincoln wrote a letter in which he predicted great danger to the country from trusts. The letter has been repeatedly shown to have been an ardent forgery, false in every particular, still it is quoted as simon pure by certain political speakers, who desire to secure votes by every hook or crook possible, without reference to honesty or truthfulness. Such methods should be understood and rebuked by the people.

Estimates are made by intelligent persons on the ground that Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Utah and Nevada will be carried by McKinley in 1900. The republican campaign managers, of course, are not putting the mining states in the republican column this year. Nevertheless the drift to the republicans in all of them is so strong that all of these states will be in doubt until the ballots are all counted. Some of them probably, despite their heavy Bryanite majority in 1896, will be won by the republicans. The republicans can win the presidency without those states, but the prospects are so favorable in them that the country will not be surprised if even Colorado should be carried by McKinley and Roosevelt.

Americans will be pleased to learn that the French press has followed the lead of London Truth, and is solid for Bryan. Henri Rochefort, editor of L'Intransigeant, declared editorially on September 26th that if Mr. Bryan be elected the expansion policy of Mr. McKinley will be struck from American politics for years to come. Libre Parole goes further, saying: "The results in the elections in the United States on the 6th of November interest our future destiny. It is for us that Bryan is working. Made a criminal by imperialism, McKinley conspires against France." All true Americans should note that Bryan is working for the interest of Europe—not of the United States.

A lame place in the present registration law is the failure to provide for issuing transfers to those who are legally registered in other counties and precincts than those to which they may have removed. By such provision a voter who expected to be in another part of the state on election day could go to the clerk of his county, get a transfer and by presenting his transfer in his new county of residence, go on record in the clerk's office as a regular voter and be saved the annoyance of hunting up six citizens and swearing in his vote. In this county, and perhaps in every other county in Oregon, there are many voters who are legally registered in other parts of the state, but who will be deprived of their vote unless they conform to the troublesome "swearing in" process.

Business demands, social engagements and religious duties will be put by from now until the first Monday in November, for the mysterious conference of the button-hole consultation on the street corner, relative to our annual municipal election. With the candidate in the field, history and tradition will be ransacked, and their anxiety will only give place to measurable contentment and peace when the votes are finally counted in their favor. Our unsalaried city officers tread a path which is not all paved with roses. Criticism is abundant, while appreciative comment is more rarely given. It must seem to the mayor or councilman that his is a thankless and discouraging task. This, however, is one of the penalties of greatness, and must be considered as such. Whoever the new officers are, they will have been elevated to public offices to serve public interests in the best sense, and as their's is merely a labor of love they should prove a credit to the people who will place them there.

The success of the McKinley administration is astonishing when the conditions of the country at the close of the preceding democratic regime are considered. Although the country was flat on its back as a result of low tariff and democratic misrule, with factories closed, labor idle and industries paralyzed in every section, it has been brought rapidly and safely to a high state of prosperity. Industries have revived, factories have opened, labor has found employment and wages have increased. And this, too, in the face of a foreign war, which it was feared by even the most sanguine could have only a demoralizing effect upon the country. The broad and liberal views of the president and his fearless, wise and able enforcement of them, will have the strongest possible sanction of the people and of history. All the business statistics, as well as the business men of the country, recognize this condition, and are against Mr. Bryan. The most non-partisan figures of commercial activity are eloquent of prosperity and of the ludicrous falsity of Bryan's doleful predictions four years ago. Every trade paper in the country, even though it tries to keep out of politics, is today contradicting Bryan's anti-prosperity utterances, and urging the preservation of the conditions that created the present activity. These signs are significant.

The tonnage of vessels chartered or available for grain cargoes enroute to, and in the harbor at Portland foots up 136,150. This will move a vast pile of wheat. At the same time, the enormous array of figures points to the importance of Oregon's metropolis as an export city. Portland is centrally located, with the best agricultural backing of any city in the world, with more railroads, more water power for manufacturing, more timber tributary, more mines of gold, silver, iron, etc., more of everything that contributes to the prosperity and advancement of a great city, than any other location on the Pacific coast. Why, then, should not Portland rapidly take her allotted place commercially? The Willamette valley will soon be one vast garden, teeming with fruits and flowers, and become rich in the diversity of its products. The water power of the Willamette river and its tributaries is unlimited, and factories and mills for the manufacture of every article entering into the consumption of man can and will be set in motion, while the vast Columbia basin an empire of itself, will contribute its raw materials. There is scarcely anything in which we do not excel the Atlantic side of our country, and it don't take a man of a very vivid imagination to see in the near future such vast developments as will make the Pacific coast the seat, and emporium of trade for this vast nation. Let Portland push to the front and assume the position so plainly marked out for her on the map of this coast. And while Portland is on the home-stretch, the country must keep pace, for the interests of city and country are identical.

Democratic leaders are beginning to realize that Missouri is a doubtful state and are trying to wake up the rank and file, but apparently in vain. All accounts agree that the party is buried in hopeless apathy and rent asunder with innumerable quarrels. The republican national committee continues to hear encouraging tidings from all parts of the state.

Market quotations in Sunday's Oregonian give out the information that three carloads of eastern eggs arrived during the week, and "another is due tomorrow, and two others are on the way to arrive later in the week." Six carloads of eggs imported into Oregon within the space of about one week shows that a condition and not a theory confronts the Oregon producer. While the best state in the union in point of natural advantages is sending to eastern markets for cold-storage eggs and paying the freight on the same, our farms are basking in the sunlight or dripping under the rain-drops, the hens are strutting around enjoying their days of idleness, and the hard-worked farmer is putting in another crop of wheat. An improved strain of egg producers, and a modern incubator on the poultry farm, in view of the amount of eastern eggs imported, would be a worthy addition to the Willamette valley farmer's assets.

The votes for the McKinley electors are increasing, and will continue to increase in exact ratio as it becomes apparent that the party of sound currency and protection has to fight such an obnoxious mass as the instigators of strikes, the labor agitators, the defenders and friends of Aguinaldo, anarchists, and other froth, bubble and "skimmings" of American politics as are heralded under the many-colored banner of the sonorous mouthed leader of the hyphenated party. Every one knows the republican party by its record, and the more the anarchists wave the red flag, the more the socialists talk repudiation and confiscation, the more voters will be made for the party now in power. The poor idiots who rub their hands in glee at every misfortune to our country because it will hurt McKinley, descended from the copperheads who used to get hilarious every time the rebels gained a victory. Discomfiture and oblivion will mark their demise, as it did that of their forefathers. American voters are thinkers and when they begin to think they begin to desert the frail ship of Bryanism as they are now doing all over the country. Some have not yet begun to think, and there are others who do not desire to give their allegiance to any proposition that does not conform to the divine, heaven-born ratio of 16 to 1. It is just as well, for without these there would not be enough Bryanites left to organize for a future campaign.

An Unpopular Move.

Mrs. Elmira Springer, prominently connected with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and especially noted for her helpful work among young women, says:

"It is safe to assert that nine-tenths of the women who belong to the organization known as the W. C. T. U., are grieved and pained beyond measure at the attitude assumed by some of their members. We allude to those unwise women who have inaugurated what is known as the 'Anti-McKinley Eadless-Prayer Chain.' "Such action is both silly and sacrilegious, and casts ridicule and reproach on christians and christian observances. Prayer is the sacred, secret cry of the soul for help and guidance, and it is belittled and profaned when ordered by postal card. We trust these prohibition women will think better of the 'army canteen' matter, withdraw their crusade against the president, and turn their attention to the improved condition of the country since the reins of government have been intrusted to his strong, capable hands.

"Four years ago the soup house was a familiar institution; the country was flooded with goods of foreign manufacture, while our working men walked the streets in enforced idleness, and want and wretchedness prevailed. How soon this was changed, and what a wave of prosperity swept over the country, after William McKinley was elected! Do these prayerful women want a repetition of such times? If they do not, then let them stop praying for Bryan's election, and after asking forgiveness for their mistake, let them go to work for that wise, patriotic christian statesman, William McKinley."

GLUTTONY

Is more common than we may think, if we define gluttony as eating beyond the body's need of sustenance and beyond the stomach's capacity for digestion and assimilation of food. That is a fair definition, and it fastens the name glutton on many a person who would resent the term as an insult. The fact of this gluttony is marked by its consequences. The overloaded stomach becomes diseased. The popular term for the condition is "weak" stomach. The "weak" stomach fails in furnishing adequate nutrition for the body, and soon the "weakness" spreads from the stomach to other organs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect assimilation of food, by which alone the health and strength of the body is maintained.

"Your medicine helped me so much that I cannot praise it too highly," writes Mrs. C. L. Brooks, of Poland, Androscoggin Co., Me. "The first dose I took helped me. I cannot forget how I felt when I took it; I was suffering everything with indigestion, and my stomach was so bloated that it seemed as though it must burst. My husband said he was going for the doctor, but I said if he would get me a bottle of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I would try that. I had not taken it long when I felt relieved, and have not had a touch of indigestion or stomach trouble since. I had been sick for four years, and less than four bottles cured me. Some people that knew me before I began to take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' tell me that they never saw such a change in any one, and they also say they don't see how I can do such large washings as I do now, when I had not done a washing for so long."

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK ?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Elm-street, BOSTON, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and one dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.
