WHAT WILL McMinnville DO?

There is a very general disposition among our Oregon neighbors to seize the golden opportunity of advertising local resources, with the object of inducing immigrants to settle among them.

During this and next month it is estimated that 2,000 immigrants from eastern states will arrive in Oregon each week. Corvallis, Independence, Albany and Eugene are more or less concerned in the matter, and are taking some very proper steps to accomplish their object. Linn county will issue a booklet of 20 pages in connection with C. H. Markham of the Southern Pacific. Albany and Eugene have held mass meetings to devise means for advertising their resources. The latter place may employ one of their citizens to stop in Portland for a time to meet new comers and try to induce them to settle in Lane county. The state of Washington is also awake, and has been much more so for years than Oregon. The people of Colfax are planning to send a delegation east to enlighten the immigration now pushing its way to these two states.

What will McMinnville and Yamhill County do? It cannot be maintained that immigrants will pay no attention to these movements. Every man knows for himself what he would do were he going to a new country. He knows that he would investigate those localities which manifested a desire for him to settle among them, and which proffered encouragement and social and business fellowship.

We are blessed above most of our neighbors in natural advantages. It is a well-known state fact in Oregon that Yamhill county leads as an agricultural district, both in fertility of soil and the broad expanse of land subservient to the plow. Of course it follows that agricultural eminence stamps her as the proper place for any establishment that can manufacture agriculture products into articles of utility and profit. Our wealth of timber resource is practically undiscovered. The dairy interest is only in its infancy. Vast acres are eligible to seeding to nutritious grasses, while most of the year cattle may roam the foothills and mountains and subsist upon the natural growth. The scarcity of beef cattle in a country so well designed for stock raising, is one of the anomalies of the time.

Our educational advantages are exactly such as fill the demands of new comers. District school, high school and college are all here with modern methods and equipment.

Transportation facilities by boat and rail enable shipments to reach the metropolis of Portland the same day they are started on their way.

Our citizenship is intelligent and congenial. It only remains for us to demonstrate that we are enterprising.

The question is: Do we want more employment of labor, greater production from lands and forests, and greater activity and better values for what we have to sell? More population and diverse employment of capital will bring this result. Because men invest their capital in the common avenues of trade and fear to branch out into something of greater possibilities, these common avenues become stagnated and business in all lines is overdone. What McMinnville and the towns in Yamhill county need, is diversified industry and pay-rolls.

To this end let us encourage immigration and community of interest, and God will help those who help themselves.

There is a good opportunity for the citizens of McMinnville to start a cannery, fruit dryer or creamery this year. M. B. Hendrick has a suitable boiler and engine and warehouse room lying idle at the railroad switch. Five thousand dollars capital would place it in working condition for either of the above purposes. Mr. Hendrick feels too far advanced in age to undertake such an enterprise alone, but has made the statement that he would give half of the above amount to establish such an institution. There will never be a better chance than this come to this town to make a start in the way of manufactures. The benefit of such institutions is made plain to us by the example of Mr. Snyder's dryer in the little town of Dayton. It does more towards scattering money and drawing business to the town than all other lines of trade, with the possible exception of the warehouses and flour mill, and its annual pay-roll amounts to $2,000 for less than a year's run.

What Will McMinnville Do?

Let us have a board of trade or some organized effort whereby we can establish mutual confidence and a harmonized movement for the promotion of the future good of the town.

A KANSAS RELECTION.

Mrs. Carrie Nation
Is the strenuous sensation
Who seeks extermination
Of the "joint."
While her modes of reformation
May invite some condemnation
She displays no hesitation
On that point.

To the work of extirpation
She proceeds with animation
And perhaps through indignation
Goes too far.
The jointists' agitation
Has increased to desperation
And she causes consternation
At the bar.

In her martial demonstration
To suppress inebriation
She has shown determination
Truly great.
And perhaps the population
Will express its approbation
And expanse intoxication
From the state.

After thoughtful contemplation
Of the Kansas situation
One cautious observation
We can form.
Prohibition legislation
With saloons in operation
Has been found a combination
Not so warm.

—GEO. H. MCCREARY.
