It has now been definitely determined that George W. Davis, clerk of the state land board, was a defaulter for exactly $30,978.33 of public money. He was under a bond of $5,000 with George G. Bingham and E. P. McCornack as surities. Davis left the state last February, as soon as it was intimated that a shortage in his state and the flight of Davis would seem to bring forcibly into prominence the necessity for a better system of bonding public officials.

HAVE WE SMALLPOX?

Most assuredly we have not. Our neighbors, however, have been quite solicitous after our health and the welfare of the community, and as a precaution they have used an over-supply of discretion in the matter of secluding town the first of the week. themselves from the possible society of the pale horse of contagion which they were led to believe was galloping up and down the streets of McMinnville snorting loathsome disease right and left. The story has been circulated and taken up on the wings of the morning and Saturday with two horses which he sold painted upon the hilltops that McMinnville was dying, and that the well people were not to be found in sufficient num- Graves of McMinnville spent the day in bers to bury the dead victims of small- Sheridan last Tuesday. pox. This led the christian spirit that characterizes good citizenship to become manifest. A neighbor came up from Carlton one day last week to pay the last respects to C. F. Daniels, whom he had learned was dead. Mr. Daniels was buesy in his garden at the time for the funeral, and was very indignant that he should be thought dead. He advised the kind friend to give no credence to the story of his sad and untimely death, as he declared it was considerably exaggerated. Similar reports have damaged the reputation of this city, the equal of any municipality in Oregon for ly overhauled and would be hardly regood health. The truth from which the cognized as the old hotel. smallpox scare originated is this: Some two months since, a family named in Buster's drug store, left on Monday Johnson, consisting of thirteen members, for a two week's visit with his parents Came from Tennessee and settled on the who live out on the coast. He at once pronounced it smallpox, and cautioned the family and attending neighbors to isolate themselves. Twelve of the thirteen have gone through the ordeal. More than three weeks ago C. F. Daniels had gone to the house and brought one of the girls to town as a domestic in his family. About the time the doctor Much cold cloudy weather of late but had called to see Mr. Johnson this girl had become ill and returned home, later breaking out with smallpox. Mr. Daniels' family of course were frightened. He closed his produce and feed store and the entire family placed themselves under voluntary quarantine. Miss Daniels gave up her place in the public school and endured the isolation with the school house three miles West of the others. All this gave rise to rumors of smallpox in McMinnville.
