Just as the tiny acorn grows into a mighty oak so any enterprise beginning in a small way will, by courteous treatment, develop into a successful, prosperous business. Note the progress of my business and ask what it means. It simply means that I am giving the public honest values for every dollar invested in my store and that everyone receives the most courteous treatment. I carry a complete assortment of dry goods and shoes as well as a fresh and up-to-date stock of groceries. I handle any kind of produce that there is a market for and pay the highest price for same. On July 6th I am going to give away for the benefit of my customers a new 1901 $40 bicycle.

Postmasters throughout the United States have received orders from the department to discontinue the paying of money orders drawn on any other office than their own. For some time past, as an experiment, postmasters have been paying money orders drawn on any post-office, when they could satisfy themselves that the orders were all right. This scheme has been found unsatisfactory, resulting in much work and confusion and some loss, hence the department decided to discontinue it May 31.

Oregon has lost a useful citizen in the death of Hon. O. H. Irvine, of McMinnville, who died in Albany last Sunday. Mr. Irvine, though comparatively a young man had, through the exercise of his abilities, attained a prominence among men that few acquire. He was a few years ago a prominent candidate before the republican congressional convention in the first district, and came near defeating Mr. Tongue.—The Dalles Times-Mountaineer.

The annual meeting of the Salem district ministerial association was held this week at North Yamhill, lasting over Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. On Monday evening, address of welcome by Rev. D. H. The pastor of the McMinnville M. E. church left on his bicycle, as when people have bicycles they do not need to depend on trains.

When one Yamhill citizen professes to have a world beater in any line, it is pretty sure to bring out another Yamhill citizen who can go the first man "one better." The excerpt last week from the North Yamhill Record telling of Lars Gregerson's cow rating at the local creamery 5 1/2 per cent of butter fat, calls out that invincible stock man and farmer, Rolla Jones of Anity, who says J. H. Douglas of his town brings milk to his skimming station from a thoroughbred Jersey which tests 6 1/2 per cent, and that there are several cows up there that go better than 5 1/2. Jones is a mighty hard man to beat on big records, but he'll get his match some day.

SMITH TALKS.

Plans of Action Discussed Which Are To Work a Future Transformation In This Country.

The farmers' meeting for an address from C. R. Smith of Minnesota, the dairy agitator for the Southern Pacific railway, came off duly at the opera house on Monday. About 200 of Yamhill's leading farmers were present, and manifested a deep interest. Mr. Smith is an entertaining and convincing speaker. He said Oregon had some good farmers as anywhere, but their neighbors would learn from them. One man grows a fine field of clover, while his neighbor says you can't grow clover on red land, in the face of 40 years' experience. A few took interest enough to come to the meeting but, a lot of neighbors hadn't time to come. He told how 17 years ago Minnesota farmers awoke to the need of diversified farming, and how as a result any one of the seven railroads running south and west of Minneapolis is doing more business in a week than any railroad in Oregon does in a month. Oregon farmers have fewer obstacles to a change of base than the Minnesota farmers had then. They didn't have to plead with them that bankruptcy was before them—it was already present. They were told to try cows. They answered: "We haven't got the cows, and we know nothing about dairying. We cannot raise in four months feed enough for eight months in competition with countries of longer growing seasons." But they agitated, and the farmers tried, and the result has been the establishment of 38 creameries in 20 townships in his section of the state, which have issued $750,000 in creamery checks in 12 years operation. Smith had met a farmer near Salem feeding as nice ensilage on the 10th of May as he ever saw anywhere. His neighbor being asked if the other man was not getting along well, replied: "Well, I don't know whether he is or not. You can't tell anything about that fellow. He's a crank and the biggest fool in the state of Oregon." This illustrated the lack of confidence there is locally among neighbors, and how little the ne'er-do-well will learn from the well-to-do. Smith didn't care whether they believed what he told them or not, so long as they would "keep talking about it" and work out their own salvation. He knew that $400 distributed throughout the year in a family was much more satisfactory and went much farther than $600 in a lump sum. The foundations for doing a good farm business are already laid in Oregon, he said. You have good strains of cattle and hogs and advantages of soil and climate that many do not have.

Smith's plan for raising corn in this valley for ensilage was given as follows in answer to a question: Would put in only as much land as I could manure. Would plow early and harrow every week till June 1st. Would select early variety of seed, as Dent, Flint or King Philip, plant 42 inches apart and 16 inches apart in row, harrow till three inches high, then shallow cultivation till top tall. Cut and put in silo when grain begins to glaze. Build silos if you haven't got them—ensilage is the lazy man's winter feed. It is 3 1/2 per cent better feed than hay. Farming 40 acres I should run 5 acres in corn every year, and follow clover in rotation of crops. Would put in silo all clover I could cure satisfactorily. Clover and corn ensilage is better feed than clover ensilage or corn ensilage alone. Vetches stand next to clover for ensilage. One acre if manured is sufficient for one cow per year. Vetches should be cut fine and wet with 20 gallons of water to the load of hay when put in silo. The following information was given in reply to various questions: Would recommend the round stave silo built of 2 x 4s, 10 or 12 feet in diameter and 20 to 30 feet high. A cubic foot of ensilage is enough for a cow per day. Multiplying the diameter of a silo by 78-100ths will give the contents in cubic feet. The cement floor was recommended rather than earth, and by no means a board floor. Studding should be cemented to the foundation. If land is clay, would subsoil a few acres every year, but not if soil is gravelly or hill land. At the present worth of feed skimmed milk from separator is worth 30c per 100 lbs. for feed. Sugar cane is as good as fodder corn for feed and a little better than timothy hay. Up to two-thirds the ration for the cow nothing is known that will give as cheap feed for the labor and land involved as Indian corn. The other third should be vetches, oats or clover hay. Feed will not materially increase the per cent of butter fat, but ill treatment of a cow by exposure or beating will decrease it, and Minnesotans are becoming educated on this point so that they are becoming kinder to the entire family. Alfalfa was not recommended where red clover could be raised, as it is a permanent pasture and hinders rotation of crops.

Smith's model for a dairy cow is as follows: Large mouth, broad forehead, bright eye, thin neck and shoulders, fall chest, wide between fore legs, sharp back with spreading ribs, large stomach, wide between ribs, broad on hips, prominent hip joints, hind legs well apart, half moon udder, large and very crooked milk vein.

Mr. Grissen spoke of the dairy interests of the Coos bay country where they operate cooperative creameries, and often realize $75 per season from a cow, feeding from silos.
