It is predicted by good judges of the hop situation that there will be a shortage in this country for home consumption, and one authority thinks the prices should be better than last yearin fact that the statistical situation is strong enough to justify a prediction that the prices will be around 20 cents per pound. This is certainly encouraging to the Oregon growers, who do not have to figure on more than half that price for a profitable business.

It is charged that some of them were killed, that others lost their property, that nearly all were ruined in business, and that many of them were driven out. The claimants number several hundred. The outrages date back to 1886, and it is declared that the city council of Butte upheld the rioters and boycotters; that the state courts upon appeal, decided, in language so unjudicial as to be itself a subject of complaint, that the city council was right, and, finally, that relief could be obtained only measarably through an appeal to the United States circuit court. The claim raises ome novel and extremely interesting points of international law. **** he informe as that where it is sown on land overgrown by wild pink that it kills the pink, which now has become a great pest in this vicinity. The barley referred to is of the Alsike variety. He first got a start of it on a small scale. Wm. Palmer received a small package of it from a relative in California. He laid it away until time to sow, when he found the mice had been in it and not over a half dozen perfect seeds were left. Mr. Palmer planted these and raised a gallon or more of barley from them. This Mr. Gilkey bought, paying a good price for it. Mr. Gilkey, the second year after purchasing seed had sufficient to sow 26 acres. It ripens early in the season. This year Mr. Gilkey cut his early in a couple of deer, the finest of the week, which he had killed while at Meadow Lake. He tells a joke on Spencer Baxter, which, having seen the transaction, appears very amusing to Mr. Adams. It appears that Mr. Baxter shot a cub bear, and the mother being near by, started for Baxter, who also hastily started for a tree in which to escape from the enraged bear. He reached a tree and made a hasty ascent. Bruin was lose at his heels, but did not climb the tree, but kept close watch of the man in the tree for two hours or more, seeming determined to secura some fresh meat by druggists, in fiftyfor dinner.
