HOME NEWS AND NOTES.

The salmon pack this year is only about 450,000 cases.

Great suffering is reported at Charleston since the earthquake.

Prince Alexander is at home again. We take no stock in the war rumors.

Potatoes they grow small, and they harvest tops and all in this valley this fall, and then they do not get many to the acre.

The Albany Bulletin, one of our ablest and best exchanges, barring its patent, will be all printed at home next month. Then it will be the best, for certain.

Sagacious of their quarry from afar, the roughs and toughs are beginning to gather in Salem in anticipation of the flush times of the state fair. A series of house breakings have been reported in that city recently.

The rumors of war have caused an upward tendency in wheat. The farmers of the Pacific northwest, while they regret war, would not object to $1 per bushel for their splendid wheat. There is plenty to feed vast armies.

The alleged fish ladder at Oregon city was the most colossal fraud of the age. It is now a thing of the past. The ditch is all that remains, through which runs a stream of water about as large as a garden hose would throw.

The Eugene Register wants the Oregonian, which professes to keep its readers informed regarding the crop situation of the world, and especially of our own section of the country, to tell people what wheat is worth any how, in Portland.

The Clintons still figure in the canal business in York state. At the conference in Syracuse, Geo. Clinton was chosen chairman, and two namesakes of DeWitt Clinton were among the vice presidents. The conference is opposed to federal aid.

Immigration Commissioners Stevenson and Starr, of New York, intend to stop the wholesale importation of Mormon recruits through that port, as far as justified by law. This looks like business. The idea of importing outlaws is an absurd one, only indulged or tolerated in the United States.

Of the group of glaciers at Glacier bay, Alaska, one is three hundred feet high and is supposed to be submerged about the same number of feet. They are about three miles wide and extend along seventy-five miles. These glaciers are the sights of the world. The pale blue tinge of ice has a fascination for the eyes. The continual falling of tons of the breaking and cracking masses causes a roar of deafening sound that no artillery could equal.

Referring to the anarchists organ in Portland, Frank D. Smith's Avant-Courier, which holds to the view that the verdict of the Chicago jury condemning those men to death "is one of the most outrageous that was ever placed upon the records of an American court," the Salem Statesman says: "We don't believe in rash things; but we are free to confess it is our opinion that a man who would father such incendiary slush as the above, deserves the same treatment as will be meted out to his Chicago brothers. We have a good deal of idle territory in this state, but there is no room for anarchists in Oregon."

The comparative merits of the daily newspaper and the monthly magazine were well-illustrated the other day. A New York journal reproduced in full the entire contents of Miss Cleveland's magazine, "even to its illustrations and fac simile of the cover." The reprint occupied but two pages of the New York daily, whose average Sunday edition is capable of producing in one issue an amount of matter equal to that contained in a year's issue of the magazine. The New York paper sold for three cents, while the same amount of matter in the magazine costs three dollars. The growth of metropolitan journalism probably accounts in a measure of the decadence of the American magazine. Our monthlies, with but one or two exception, have not kept pace with the material development of the country.
