NEWS AND NOTES.

Hon. John M. Dormer, at one time compositor on the Oregonian, now secretary of the state of Nevada, has just been renominated to that position.

The new one dollar silver certificates are said to be the prettiest money that the government ever issued. That's because Matha Washington's profile looms up in one corner.

The hard-working old darkey in Waco, Texas, who claims to have been the first husband of Mrs. Parsons, is to be congratulated on the fact that he is not her second one.

The sleeping car porters assembled in St. Louis last week to form a union and secure their rights, could hardly work the public more effectively in a body than they have done individually in the past.

The king business has become so exceedingly depressed of late that almost any other opening is more promising for an enterprising young man. The king of Greece is thinking of following Prince Alexander's example, and abdicating. A few judicious fires or failures ought to put any intelligent business man in a far better position than the average sovereign occupies when his throne becomes too shaky to hold him.

Sterling P. Rounds has stepped down and out of the federal printing office at Washington. The joint committee on printing in both houses, joined in urging his retention by the president, irrespective of politics, and when he retired he did so on his own motion to take charge of a well-known republican paper which he has purchased. During his term of office he disbursed over $12,000,000. Some appreciation of the accounting system in the department may be obtained from the fact that the closest scrutiny of both the republican and democratic administrations has failed to show the payment of a dollar of this immense sum which was not made according to law. There have been no blunders clerical or otherwise. Not a single voucher or account has ever been suspended or found in error. The record is perfect.

Astoria deals liberally with its firemen. The city furnishes each company with a house, apparatus, fuel and all necessaries, including a telegraph alarm, and pays to each steamer $125 a month, out of which the company pays its engineer $100 per month, reserving the balance for company expenses. McMinnville companies are content when the council lets them severely alone.
