EDITORIAL NOTES.

Coney Island has become the resort of so many depraved characters that it is doubtful if the hopes of Brooklyn will ever become realized as a summer city by the sea with no rival as the best watering place on the continent. Let the thing go a little further in the moral depression, and no respectable man will want, with his family, to spend a month, or a week, or a day, or even an hour amid such surroundings.

Senator Sherman's speech, at Portsmouth, Ohio, is quoted as extensively as was Blaine's Augusta speech opening the campaign in Maine. Not looking through partisan eyes it must be admitted that whenever, and wherever these gentlemen speak they have the Nation for an audience. By more than thirty years of faithful public service, by splendid achievements in fields of labor demanding the exercise of great mental abilities, by work that has brought good results to each and all of their countrymen, these men have earned and hold such place in the respect and confidence of the people that their words carry weight, even amongst their most bitter political enemies.

Concerning the removal of Indians from Arizona by Gen. Miles, Gov. Tuttle says: "The removal was demanded by the Arizona pioneers, and by every newspaper in the territory for years; and in every annual report made by me under Arthur's and Cleveland's administration I asked for the same, and Secretary Lamar, in making his report to congress last year, embodied my recommendations, thereby endorsing them. Miles pursued the only possible course to secure peace in the territory. It was always Gen. Crook's opinion and always mine, that the capture of Geronimo on any terms, and the removal of him and his men, was essential to permanent peace. If these Indians had been forced to surrender unconditionally, as the government demanded, which it would have been almost impossible to make them do, and had been given a legal trial for their crimes, what good would it all have done. No witnesses were alive to prove their guilt, and they would have proved cleared for want of evidence; that is if they had not escaped before their trial and resumed their bloody operations."

The editor of the Reporter, in conversation with an old time prospector about two years since received an indelible impression respecting the mountain lakes of Oregon ranges, and made it the topic of a chapter in a book soon to be published upon the mountains, rivers and lakes of the Pacific Northwest, including Lieutenant Schwatka's latest Alaskan discovery. A blue mountain lake, nestled high upon the range about ten miles south east of Lone rock, is thus referred to by the Baker city Bunchgrass Blade: "It is a very fine little lake, about 400 yards long by 200 yards wide, near Winelands mill. Although quite a dense growth of water lilies, wild rice and other vegetation somewhat shade the surface, yet the bottom of the lake can be seen at a considerable depth, so clear is the water. As the scenery around this lake is very fine, and magnificent views can be obtained from the mountain peaks near by, and as there are many other attractions to please the health-hunter and tourist, it is predicted that some time in the near future this place will become one of the most popular resorts in eastern Oregon. A short distance from the lake is a very tall tamarack tree, which measures over eighteen feet in circumference."

Evidence accumulates to establish the fact that in one thing Gen. Grant was most certainly a failure. Raising a family. To those who were acquainted with the details of the funeral arrangements of Gen. Grant, nothing was more disgusting than the pretentious quarrel between several undertakers who figured at Mt. McGregor. This indecent episode is recalled by the appearance of E. Holmes & Co., of Saratoga, with a bill of $500 for embalming Gen. Grant's body. They were the men originally intrusted with the matter by Dr. Douglas and then dismissed by Rev. Dr. Newman in order to make way for his protegee Merritt. No one connected with the Grant family will pay this bill, and it has been presented to Mr. Arkell, the owner of the Mt. McGregor estate. The editor of the New York Sun, in order to suppress so miserable a scandal, offered to pay the bill himself, if it should be presented to him. It would appear, however, as if the family of Gen. Grant, benefitted as they have been financially since his death, should have refused to allow such an exhibition as this to be made to the public, but their failure to do so simply adds to the prevalent belief that they are unworthy of his name.

The Astoria Advertiser by Geo. W. Snyder, late of this city, has just made its appearance. The Astorian says of it: "Should Bro. Snyder continue its publication we shall be glad of his assistance and friendly co-operation to aid in helping the city and county in every way that it is possible to do, and he can count on our hearty recognition at all times."

A Business Proposition to Everybody.

Having the most complete and best selected stock of goods on the west side, outside of Portland, as conceded by all commercial men, and my facilities for buying being equal to or better than any house here, I am prepared to furnish you with Dry Goods, Clothing, Gents' Furnishing Goods, Boots and Shoes, Groceries, Glassware and Crockery, at prices as low or lower than any house outside of Portland, and if you buy upon same terms as you do when you go to Portland, buy in quantities paying cash, I engage to compete with the retail houses of Portland on the same class of goods, save and except Sugar, Salt and such goods as freight figures up on so that it cannot be done. This does not apply to some cheney houses who would bait you by selling some special article at a sacrifice, and making it up on some other articles. IT SHALL BE STRAIGHT BUSINESS. I especially invite purchasers, to call and make an inspection of the goods and price, before buying elsewhere. All goods marked down during clearance sale will be sold at clearance sale prices. Prices of all goods will be plainly marked on them, and no clerk is authorized to make any cut or deviation on them, and will be discharged for doing so before he has authority. SMALL PROFITS AND QUICK RETURNS IS THE MOTTO. CASH IN HAND OR SHORT CREDITS MUST BE THE RULE. A. J. APPERSON.
