

The Daily Reporter.

D. C. IRELAND & CO. PUBLISHERS,
McMinnville, Or. --- Oct. 15, 1886

Good times coming.
The Albany Herald looks fine in its six column dress.

Desirable town property for sale cheap. Inquire of E. Russ.

The Brown Bear, the finest five cent cigar in the market, at J. Harv. Henderson's city grocery store.

Mr. and Mrs. Phelps of the Yaquina Mail reached here yesterday on a visit to the metropolis and laid over to take in the best of Yamhill.

Mattie Allison was acquitted at Salem, upon the charge of murder. The verdict was received with general satisfaction on the part of the public, who have taken great in the trial.

John Shipley and family, of New Philadelphia, who have been visiting Mrs. Shipley's mother, Mrs. W. S. Powell, in Portland, have returned home.

Several of our valley exchanges are offering the American Farmer as a premium paper to catch subscribers. The Farmer is a sickly little monthly filled with advertisements.

Hon. I. W. Case, the pioneer banker of Astoria, and J. B. David, Esq., of Portland, Or., arrived in town yesterday and left the same day for the Henry Warren place near this city.

The Columbia river waterway convention met yesterday at Vancouver. It is a body that is charged with shaping public sentiment upon the most important of questions to the interests of Oregon and Washington territory.

We are pleased to hear that the city council is thinking about street work. We hope that when this much needed work is begun it will be thoroughly carried through. In this connection we beg respectfully to remind them of Macbeth's recipe for cooking a beef-steak, or some such thing:

If 'twere done, when it is done—
Then 'tis well 'twere done quickly.

Our statement, on another page, of the building season just closed, makes a good appearance. It will be remembered that the lumber market was extremely short during the spring, and improvements necessarily hampered. Mr. Adams, of Jones & Co., thinks we have placed a fair estimate on the amount of capital invested. Another year will tell a wonderful story in McMinnville.

Cranks are more numerous this fall than last. The latest batch is in Chicago under sentence of death, "dying proudly, defiantly, for the cause of justice." These are the so-called anarchists; murderers in fact; Speis and his chums. The blatherskites have the brazen effrontery, in the very face of death, to compare their executions with Socrates, Glorando Brun, and Jesus Christ; and there is an adulated fool in Portland who sits and stares and sings "sickum" to this "cause for human rights." Great and avenging God! What a stock of "leniency" the American people must have in store.

A "good friend" of the Benton Leader objects to that paper "because it is always puffing." Albany. The Leader denies the soft impeachment, and says: "Whenever we mention a bit of enterprise upon the part of our Albany friends, it is they who furnish the item. If they were not enterprising we couldn't mention their enterprise. They built a school house for their district school that cost more than $16,000; they have built a public hall that is a credit to the city; they have secured the railroad bridge and car shops by liberal subscriptions. We don't puff Albany; she don't need it. It is Corvallis we are concerned about. Our two district schools are struggling along with half the number of teachers necessary, and with school-houses that ought to be replaced with something more in keeping with our pretensions. We have a college promised us, with its accompanying expenditure of $10,000 a year among us, on a condition but little more expensive than the Albany schoolhouse, yet we are halting and palavering about raising the money. Our houses are all full, so that there is absolutely no place for a new comer to live; yet not a single new house is building. Our public business is done in a court house, old, antiquated, rotten and inconvenient. The county judge has no office furnished him in which to conduct the business of his office, and the jail would be a disgrace to a community of 'Digger Indians.'"
