A Commercial "Tea Traveler" who has been all over the country the past three weeks left the up train last evening at no station, the conductor stopping to put him off in the darkness and gloom of the forest. His conscience must smite him, as his only excuse, related to our informant in confidence was that everywhere he went he saw Miles Hendrick, from Portland to Idaho, from McMinnville to Astoria, by land and by water, and he conceived the idea that Hendrick was a detective, camping on his trail.
