The Star.

Beside the eternal sea one night I slept;
But soft airs fanned me. I from my dream-land broke,
While angry storm-winds down the black west swept,
And while night's clouds yet lingered I awoke.
Afair, through infinite skies divinely clear,
The star of morning trembled purely bright,
As though thought, feeling warmed her silvery sphere,
And throbb'd within her living heart of light.
With mellow radiance, pale, yet beautiful,
She touch'd the summit of the dipping mast.

The swelling sails above the ship's dark hull,
The scudding mists that o'er the gray sea passed;
And still the changing, yet unchanging sea
Throbb'd with vast pulses toward the star of morn,
And strove to soothe his moan to melody,
Lest she, fair orb, should set in fear and scorn
Young birds began to twitter in the nest;
Thin grasses whispered, dreaming of the sun;
From high sea-polished cliff, seagulls, at rest,
With grave-eyed wonder watch'd the shining one.

As though they deem'd her some transfigured bird,
A tender flower, awakening at my feet,
Sigh'd in a breath more clear than spoken word,
"Hail, blessed life! Hail, starry sister sweet!"
Ineffable love fill'd all the extent of space.
Hush'd grew that deep roar by the rocking bar,
And while the dim veil rose from Nature's face
I heard a voice that issued from the star
And said: "Behold! I am the star that shone

"O'er great Taygetus, o'er Sinai's height,
On Moses, Dante; I the firebrand thrown
By God's own hand at the dark brow of night!
Lo! I am she, whom men believe no more,
And yet I live, and yet my life shall be,
When earth lies shattered, human destiny o'er.
Ye nations, I am ardent Poesy!
Up ye who sleep! Faith, Virtue, Courage, wake!
Mount, thinkers, sentinels, each untrodden height!
Behold he comes, for whom a path I break—
"The angel Liberty, the giant Light."
—Victor Hugo.

A German's Daughter.

The empress of Austria is the daughter of a German nobleman of high standing, who leads a somewhat secluded life and is, therefore, not much known throughout the German empire. This prince, though of ample means, does not indulge in extravagant habits to any great extent, and does not differ in appearance from any ordinary citizen. Some time ago the prince was riding on a Bavarian railroad when a well-dressed man entered the coupe in which the prince was seated. He introduced himself as a brewer of Munich, and was very communicative, having not the least idea with whom he was riding.

"Yes," he said, "I am on my way to Vienna to attend the wedding of my daughter. She is going to marry a banker, and will be one of the wealthiest ladies of Vienna."
"I am glad to hear that," said the prince, "for I, too, have a daughter at Vienna, and she, too, is doing exceedingly well."
"And may I know who your daughter is?" asked the brewer.
"Certainly, sir," said the prince; "she is the empress of Austria."

Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World, is credited with the possession of $400,000 in registered 4-per-cent bonds, and his income for the current year is estimated at $300,000, indicating the possession of property to the amount of $7,500,000. Twenty years ago he was a penniless boy in St. Louis.

Louisiana sportsmen have hitherto been careful not to shoot the white cranes which abound in St. Landry, but now large numbers of these beautiful birds are being killed solely for their feathers, which are used on the wearing apparel of women. There should be an Audubon society in Louisiana.
