BLAINE ON CIVIL SERVICE.

A Democratic Estimate.

Here, indeed, is richness! The Louisville Courier-Journal, the great democratic paper of the south, entreats Mr. Blaine to declare against civil service reform; and, in this behalf, it thus addresses him:

You beat the force bill conspiracy, and you beat the third party conspiracy, and if you lend the great popularity of your name and the weight of your influence to beat this revolutionary scheme of political phariseism and benevolent milk-sopery, you will deserve well of your country and will be remembered in the world to come, even though you may never be president of the United States.

It may be half suspected that Mr. Blaine would rather be president than be right on this question. But, what a scream against Grover Cleveland, to come from a great democratic organ, this appeal to James G. Blaine. Mr. Blaine defined his position upon this topic in his speech at Huntington Pa., October 19th, reported in the Philadelphia Press. In effect he said that the English civil service, which was held up as a model for our government by those who left the republican party two years ago, is now under investigation and apparent condemnation by the English themselves; that the British themselves have instituted a commission to examine into the alleged abuses, and that Geo. W. Smalley, apparently agreeing, hitherto, with the American admirers of the English service, now declares the belief in England to be that the civil service is worse in all the departments of the government than it was forty years ago. Mr. Smalley gives a somewhat detailed recital of the defects and abuses alleged to exist in the English service—defects and abuses which were never attributed to our civil service, even by its most merciless censor. His argument implied, and was intended to imply, that the republican party had been wise in not adopting the English system, with its life tenure and its large pension list, and all the attendant evils, which have at last demanded investigation by a ministerial commission. He endeavored to illustrate how truly American, in its best sense, were the whole policy and history of the republican party, and how, under the lead of the so-called independents, the democratic party, both in its revenue system and its civil service rules, was to be conformed to British policies just at the very time when the British themselves are finding a fatal weakness in those policies. In short, though he did not say so in words, he meant to convey his belief that the very worst leaders and guides for a continental republic are those who persist in seeing the perfection of human government in an insular monarchy, whose conditions are, in all respects, radically different from those of our own broad land.

The labor of an editor can only be appreciated by those who have had some experience in it. The merest slip of the pen, an epithet too much, a wrong date, a word mis-spelt, or a wrong initial before it, the misinterpretation of some passage, perhaps incapable of interpretation, the most trifling offense to the personal or national susceptibilities to those who do not even profess to care for the feelings of others, may prove not only disagreeable and even costly mistakes to which an editor is liable. An editor must be on the spot until the paper is sent to press, and make decisions on which not only the approval of the public, but even great causes may hang. He cannot compose in the solitude of a study, or husband his strength in the freshness of the green fields; he must see the world, converse with its foremost actors, be open to information and guard against error. All this should be borne in mind by those who complain that journalism is not infallibly accurate, just and agreeable.

Notice To My Patrons.

In consequence of declining health, which prevents me from making personal application to parties indebted, I am compelled to thus publicly say that all bills due and unsettled January 1st 1887 will be placed in other hands for collection.

Wm. H. BINGHAM.
McMinnville, Or., Dec. 2d, 1886.

RING THE CHANGES.

Ring Out the Old -- Ring in the New.

In view of some changes in the business world, as well as among producers and laborers, it is well that we should one and all think of our own interests as well as that of others, and once in a while call a halt, take account of what stock we have on hand, whether it be in cattle, horses, merchandise or farms, and ascertain for ourselves our present condition and future prospects, and make such changes from time to time as each of us, after mature deliberations, find our better judgments may indicate. In view of these things I shall introduce to you on or about New Years, New Styles, New Goods, and a Radical change in the management of the Business which I trust may prove to our mutual advantage. It is with this object in view that it to be adopted. It will, upon investigation, be found simple and just to one and all. The time is past when a man can sell goods on one year or for an indefinite period, and compete with those who sell exclusively for cash. I shall on or about Jan. 1st introduce to you a system possessing all the advantages of both the credit and the cash systems, and none of the disadvantages of either.

A. J. APPERSON.

Special Notice.

In view of the change soon to take place, I desire all accounts to be settled by the 1st of Jan. A word to the wise is sufficient. Call and settle.
