

THE COUNTY PRESS.

From the Herald.
They say Dayton is a dull town; nobody in it is alive; that there is only a half dollar in the town, and that is handed around. All kinds of remarks, such as above, are being made every day, by some one. It is true that all of our small towns are treated in a similiar manner, but, we believe Dayton fares the worst. There is no use for such talk. The people who talk and jibe so much are the very ones who don't help to elevate the country's interests. See if they are not. Dayton is not a dead town, nor will it become such, Dayton has the best location for a city in Yamhill county; it has the Yamhill river, which is always high enough for boats to make regular trips, and there is as fine a section of farming country surrounding it as there is in Yamhill county. The town also has good buildings, nice streets, splendid sidewalks and beautiful shade trees. It also has the nicest park of any town in Yamhill. Our merchants do a large trade and all kinds of business is prosperous. What Dayton needs is money expended in the interest of the town. We want a saddler, a shoemaker, and a flouring mill, very much, We surmise that Dayton will be improved more the coming year than ever before. May it be so,
