McMinnville, Or. - Dec. 11, 1886

New Year Edition.

The staff of the Reporter are now at work upon the great edition for New Years. Each town in the county will be visited and its past, present and future outlook given to our readers in readable form. This edition will surpass anything yet attempted by the publishers.

OUR MERCHANTS, LAWYERS, DOCTORS AND PATRONS.

Are informed that now is the opportunity to send in your orders for copies of our great edition for New Years, as this will be strictly a county paper for the benefit of the county, is expected that liberal patronage will be extended. The size of the weekly will be eight pages, eight columns to the page, just twice the present size. If you do not leave your orders now, you will not have a chance later on. The price will be single copy 10 cents, or three for 25 cents. Now is your chance to advertise old Yamhill to the world by sending to your friends in the east, an issue of this great edition.

The Narrow Gauge Open.

A private dispatch to the Reporter announces that the first through train over the Narrow Gauge Railway will leave Portland for Dallas this morning, to pass McMinnville Junction at 10:15 a. m. A delegation of forty gentlemen from Portland will be on board the train. We offer it as a seasonable suggestion that a delegation of the representative men of this city go over to the Junction, about three miles east of the city, on the Dayton road, and there extend our hearty congratulations to the narrow gauge people, upon the final successful accomplishment of the near completion of this very important work; greet the enterprise with solid manifestations of welcome, as becomes the people of the metropolis of Old Yamhill county, and bid them God speed in their efforts. The liverymen will take three or four hackloads of people; as many as desire to join are requested to apply at the offices of the stables. Be at the junction at 10:15 a. m., to-day.

Mr. Beecher is reported as saying that he has no sympathy with an "eight-hour man with a fourteen-hour wife."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There was nothing in the high-priced Portland Corsage bouquet after all but chrysanthemums, myrsiphilum, adiantum, asperagas, temussimus and a little wire, moss paper, etc. The whole fuss was probably because the customary mustard was lacking. Florists will learn from this that society young men understand thoroughly the component parts of a wedding bouquet and will not pay full price for those that lack flavor.

The fourth "jumper" from the Brooklyn bridge is a German lad of 18 years who made the leap a week ago, and still lives, though suffering from internal injuries, in a hospital. This boy has beaten all the other bridge jumpers having taken the leap from the middle span where it is ten feet higher than at points near the towers from which his predecessors made the leap. He was incited to the act by the daily study for a week of a big blue sign in front of a Brewery dime museum near his home, on which a stiff-necked and rigid-kneed young man is represented as shooting through space below a charming sketch of the Brooklyn bridge down in gray. Great blue and white circulars all over the building announce that "Lawrence Donovan, king of the jumpers would not go in a dime museum, but $1,000 a week brought him." Feeding on all this greatness every day, says an exchange, it is easy to see how the boy, who earned only $4 a week, was led by it to go and try his luck. The boy in this case is to be pitied, and not the less in the fact that the leap left him with a miserable semblance of life.

The sudden and unexpected disappearance of C. P. Dixon, resident agent of the Canadian Pacific railroad in Portland has disclosed the fact that he left many impatient creditors who are anxiously awaiting his return. It is currently stated that he was a victim of pasteboard and ivory, in other words, that he was addicted to gambling, which absorbed much of his time and resources. So far the traveling auditor of the Canadian Pacific railroad company has found nothing wrong in the accounts of the missing agent.

E. V. Smalley of the northwest, lately met in New York the two elder sons of President Garfield; tall, handsome young men, of good manner and manly bearing. Harry is twenty-three and James twenty-one. Both have finished their collegiate studies at Williams, and are now taking the Columbia college law course. They intend to practice law in Cleveland. The younger boys, Irvin and Abram are at school in New Hampshire. The family homestead of Mentor has been enlarged by an addition of a stone wing, in which is a fire-proof room containing the mementoes and testimonials connected with the life and death of the martyr president, and the very copious biographical collected by his private secretary, J. Stanley Brown. No arrangements have yet been made by Mrs. Garfield for the biography, either as to authorship or the general plan of the work. She wisely thinks that the numerous books written about Garfield before and after his death supply all present wants and that the standard biography should not appear until the perspective of time has placed his career in its true and permanent relation to the history of the country.
