

Of the eight beautiful calendars for 1887, which are published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., two are compiled from the works of Robert Browning and Nathaniel Hawthorne. The calendars published in previous years, made up of selections from Emerson, Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell, Whittier, and Mrs. Whitney, are also reissued for 1887. All these calendars are brought out on a plan entirely new, the chief features of which are the additional information given, in regard to the day of the week upon which each day of the year will fall the consecutive number of each day of the year, the days on which the moon is new and full, the anniversaries of noted events and of the birth of famous men, ecclesiastical and civil days, information respecting rates of postage, and measures of length, weight, and capacity; also dates of the eclipses during the year 1887, and of the morning and evening stars. These calendars, although not less artistic than those of previous years, and containing many features which render them of greater value, are sold at one half the price, namely 50 cents. How would Paul Boyton do for the Mexican mission? He has attained world-wide celebrity by his devotion to water.

Whatever else congress may do or fail to do this winter it ought not to adjourn without passing the electoral count bill.

Mr. Ferry, the lately-deposed French premier, a correspondent writes: "He always shook men's hands with a hearty grip, he could laugh loud, and long, even when not amused; if conversation bored he could light it up suddenly with a few crackling jokes, but he generally preferred to sit silent, smoking penny cigars, for he was not fond of smoking a pipe, and taking mental notes of what was being said around him. Now and then, especially if a talker appealed to him, he would nod approval with a grave closing of the eyes, which is the supreme politeness in the art of listening. He never squandered his knowledge in small talk so that his public speeches always took his most intimate friends aback. Gambett, one said to him: "You are the most secretive of chatterboxes," the truth being that Ferry used commonplace ideas in private intercourse, just as some men keep half-pence for beggars."

Notice To My Patrons.

In consequence of declining health, which prevents me from making personal application to parties indebted, I am compelled to thus publicly say that all bills due and unsettled January 1st 1887 will be placed in other hands for collection.
