McMinnville, Or. - Dec. 30, 1886

Although its exit is deferred the secret senate session must go.

Mrs. James G. Fair not only got a divorce, but she got $4,000 of her husband's money.

Jay Gould is beginning to suspect that the federal courts belong to that limited portion of the whole earth which he does not yet own.

Andrew Coleman, of New York, "saw" the fellows who jumped from the Brooklyn bridge and the other crowd who shot Niagara in barrels, and then he "went them fifty better." He eloped with his mother-in-law!

For the past year the flour of the Lafayette mills has ranked, not only in our town but wherever sold, as the very best obtainable. For some months past, various cheap and inferior brands have been foisted upon the public under the pretense that they were just as good but people will not have it so. Ask J. Harv. Henderson.

Illustrations are not wanting, yet many laboring men fail to see what is the matter. The mill hands in Peabody and Salem, Massachusetts, had no quarrel with their wages or employers, but, being Knights of Labor, were ordered to strike five months ago, and struck. The result is a failure of the strike and permanent loss of their employment. The statement often made, that all the rest of the world despises the wageworker, is a pernicious lie, intended to turn the laborer into an Ishmaelite for the benefit of anarchists.

The Oregonian seems very much worried about the way W. S. Ladd proposes to expend his money, and kindly advises him to give it to the poor at home instead of to a San Francisco institution of charity. But Mr. Ladd would there by get an equal donation for a Portland charity. We can't see says a contemporary, why a philanthropist cannot exercise his choice of charities. Besides he is very liberal in other charities at home and would seem to be entitled to be let alone.

CURRENT THOUGHT.

Mary Harper, a Cleveland servant girl, has inherited $250,000 from a relative in Philadelphia. The silver mills of Montana represent an investment of $20,000 and mining machinery as much more.

A Chicago paper says that if "Chicago is New York without a collar, Omaha is Chicago without a shirt."

The holders of the boxes in the Metropolitan opera house in New York this season represent $790,500,000.

Francis Palms, the Detroit millionaire, left $2,000 for charitable purposes, and $6,000,000 for his heirs to squander.

Fees paid the lawyers in the Morgan will contest in New York amount to $500,000. The estate is worth $10,000,000.

George Francis Train gives his autograph to everybody who asks for it, and predicts that it will sell for $10 in five years.

Since the discovery of coal at Omaha, that ambitious town rather sneers at the existence of such a state as Pennsylvania.

The receipts of the United States treasury during November were $27,000,000 as against $24,000,000 in November, 1885.

We are pained to observe a decided decadence in the humorous department of our esteemed contemporary, the Congressional Record.

There are sentences in the inaugural address of the governor of South Carolina which would have been a beautiful fit in a nullification speech by John C. Calhoun.

The anti-rent war in Ireland will soon grow to mammoth proportions. It will be marked by atrocious cruelties and widespread suffering. But it will speed the coming of home rule.

Labouchere has made in truth a joke that will stick. He tells of an oyster so large that it took three men to swallow it whole. This is perhaps the only English oyster joke since the Conquest.

A sermon described as "too indecent to be printed," was preached in a Boston pulpit last Sunday. The author of that discourse should be appointed chaplain to Lord Colin Campbell.

The new public printer, Benedict, has made himself so odious to both democrats and republicans by his removals and appointments in the government printing office, that his appointment as public printer will, without much doubt, be rejected by the senate.
