

The Daily Reporter.

D. C. IRELAND & CO. PUBLISHERS.

McMinnville, Or. - - Jan. 7, 1887

Geo. W. Burt was registered at the Gilman yesterday.

The daises are budding, in the open air.

Mrs. A. L. Talmage goes on a visit to friends in Tacoma this week.

Mrs. J. C. Fair accompanied her husband to Gopher valley yesterday.

Mrs. J. H. Turner and daughters will reside in Portland. Miss Anna left yesterday.

The ladies guild of the Episcopal church will meet on the 12th at the residence of Mrs. Jas. Turner.

If you want any books or magazines bound give them to J. C. Cooper. He does as good work as can be done in Portland.

The Craig manufacturing company of North Evanston, Ill., is an institution in which you wish to take as little stock as possible.

A new era has begun its dawn upon Tillamook county, and from this date will she stalk ahead in rapid stride toward more prosperous days.

Every acre of ground in Yamhill county that produces wild strawberries, is white with the blossoms of that fruit to-day. We have n't had a frost for three weeks.

The managers of the Sal-Muscotel may be frauds, perhaps they are of the first water; but the stuff sold by Rogers & Todd is all that it is advertised to be. Try it, as a grape cure.

A. P. Wilson writes from Hobsonville, one of the leading cannery points at Tillamook, that he is now fixed as clerk and assistant to the book keeper of the TPCo, of which Hon. C. Lienenweber is president. We feel like congratulating both the company and Mr. Wilson upon this happy combination.

A. J. Cooper came near losing a fine horse on the way into this city yesterday. While crossing the South Yamhill bridge, inside of the corporation his horse broke through a bad hole, and narrowly escaped breaking his leg. As it was, the horse was injured, and Mr. Cooper's disposition is to make somebody sweat for it. Perhaps a few suits for damages may have a tendency to awaken the proper authorities to a realizing sense of the situation.

There were 69 free scholarships held in the state university last year.

The steamer Santa Maria is en route to Yaquina, in the OPR line from San Francisco.

Fred Schwatka has another job on snow shoes. This time he goes to Yellowstone park in search of fame.

Ben Holladay, jr., died in Washington on the 3d, and his father is so seriously ill that recovery is extremely doubtful.

Who will send us two or three copies of the daily Reporter of Dec. 2d, 15th, and September 28th. We need them for files.

The heaviest snow storm ever experienced is going its annual round. Awhile ago it was in England, now it appears in Louisiana.

Senator Mitchell probed to the bottom of the Cascades muddle, and he calls to light the fact that Col. Parke is himself responsible for the removal of Maj. Jones. The report covers one hundred pages of matters in answer to the inquiry. Col. Parke is hedging to save himself.

Professor Foster's storm came to time in good shape in great Britain and caused widespread disaster, both by land and sea. The gale was unprecedented in fury and great loss of life is feared. But the Reading mans predictions concerning Oregon do not pan out worth a cent.

The Corvallis Gazette numbers among the permanent possessions of that city a "postoffice and one hundred men who want it." East Portland goes that city "one better by adding some half dozen women to the list of those who "want the postoffice."

A Cornelius man spilled some powder on the railroad track near that place a few days ago, and to get rid of it he touched it with a lighted match. The powder vanished; also most of the hair, the mustache, eyebrows and eyelashes with which he went into the conflict.

Mrs. Simpkins' oldest boy had gone west, and a friend of the family was making some inquiries about him. "I understand John is an attorney," he said. "Yes, and he's got lots of business," she answered with a mothers' pride. "Is he a criminal lawyer?" A shadow fell on the good old lady's face. "No, not yet," she said. "Leastways he hain't told me. But I am afraid he will be. The law is so tempting."

Who Were They.

Salem Statesman.

Two fresh young men from Amity, came over the new bridge, to Salem, yesterday. They came to capture this burg, and proceeded to get outside of a liberal supply of forty-rod bug juice, the kind that both cheers and inebriates, and makes a millionaire out of a pauper by a very short cut. The road to fortune by this route only extends down a man's throat. It is a popular route. Well, these two bad young men from Yamhill traveled that route, and they thought they owned the town, without a flaw in the title, and shortly after eight o'clock, they proceeded to take possession. They started in at the fag end of their newly acquired property, and kicked up a rumpus in the rancherie of a woman with an unsavory reputation, named Kate Baker, who keeps a den of infamy at the foot of State street. The two fresh young men turned the furniture all upside down, ran the occupants of the den out, and when the officers found them, they were trying to kick a hole in the roof. They were taken to the city jail, and will attend Judge Bowie's matinee this morning. Thus will end the mad career of two fresh young men from Yamhill, who came to Salem to see the sights.

The burning question in East Portland: "Who will be postmaster?"

Traveler do you want good accommodations, good beds and good victuals at reasonable rates? Try the St. Charles.

Mrs. Sarah Odell died at her home near Dayton, January 1st, aged 83 years. She was the mother of W. H. Odell, now postmaster at Salem. She came to Oregon many years ago.

Lane county mourneth. She has an insurance case on docket that before it is ended will cost as much as an ordinary murder trial, and all without recompense in the way of sensational testimony, and a neck-tie party in dim prospect.

The trial in Union county of Robier, Tibbets and Geofrey for the murder of Willis Skiff, resulted in a verdict of not guilty, the death of the alleged murdered man not having been proven to the satisfaction of the jury. The body of Skiff has never been found, and though doubt less he was foully dealt with, nothing graver than "disappearance" can be proven.

Observations.

No one deserves the least sympathy for suffering from piles when he can be cured by calling on Dr. Taylor at the office of Dr. Johnson. Without additional pain without the use of the knife or chloroform, and if the cure is not complete and satisfactory, no charges. If you can't accept these terms you ought to suffer.

Will remain a few days. Irving and White, the popular repairers will remain here for a few days only to give those who desire to have their Pianos, Organs or Sewing Machines, tuned, cleaned or repaired by first class workmen. These gentlemen have had twenty years practical experience in their business. Satisfaction guaranteed. No money required until parties have had time to test work and are satisfied. They will do work by the "live and let live" rule. Give them a trial. We can vouch for them that they are reliable and will do as they agree.

Mrs. Breon is prepared to receive a few day boarders. Three gentlemen can be furnished with rooms. Corner of Third and H streets, last house on the right before crossing railroad track.
