Complimentary to Oregon.

The Times Washington special says: The families of the United States senators from Oregon fill a prominent place in the fashionable world of the national capitol during the present season. The drawing-room receptions of their ladies were the events of last week and inaugurated gaieties in honor of their daughters, who are acknowledged belles. It is no disparagement of many Washington belles, who add to the attractions of the social world this year, to say that Miss Mattie Mitchell and Miss Agnes Dolph are most beautiful, accomplished and popular young ladies who are creating such a furore in this gay world. They have just entered their twenties, Miss Mitchell being a trifle older. It is a singular coincidence that the former Portland law firm of Mitchell & Dolph should represent the senatorial firm of the young distant state of Oregon; that Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Dolph should be among the most attractive and popular ladies in the senatorial circle, and that Miss Mattie Mitchell and Miss Agnes Dolph should be among the brightest and social jewels of the season.

John Roach the ship builder, died at his home on the morning of the 10th.

It is possible that New York will again send Hon. Roscoe Conkling to the senate.

Frank B. May, son of Sam May, once secretary of state of Oregon, is reported to be a defaulter in San Francisco to his employer to the amount of $10,000. The father was a defaulter to this state.

Gen. Gresham, one of the ablest republicans in the country, and supposed to be an aspirant for presidential position, says that if James G. Blaine will accept the presidential nomination in 1888 he will receive it and will be elected.

The Retiring Officers.

Salem Statesmen.

This is the last day of the official terms of Gov. Z. F. Moody, Hon. R. P. Earhart, secretary of state, and Hon. Edw. Hirsch, state treasurer, Governor Moody has served the state ably and efficiently for four years and has been the governor in every sense of the word. His official acts have merited the approbation of the public, and as a public officer he has been courteous and affable with all with whom he has come in contact. His handsome residence on Piety Hill has frequently been the scene of brilliant and most pleasant social gatherings, while himself and his estimable wife have extended their hospitalities with a liberal and homelike cordiality.

Hon. R. P. Earhart is a gentleman whom every one knows and whom every one likes. In his official capacity there are none more accommodating and prompt. His office during his administration has been conducted on purely business principles, and he turns it over to his successor a model of systematic neatness. Mr. and Mrs. Earhart and daughters have added materially to the social enjoyment of especially the young people of our city, while hospitality to all is characteristic of the family.

Hon. Edw. Hirsch is too well known in our midst to need any introduction at our hands. As an officer he is the peer of the most efficient and obliging, and as a private citizen is honored and respected by all. His family, too, have added life to social circles and are general favorites in our midst.

Collectively speaking, the administration just closed has been one of which the republican party of this state may well feel proud. Its record has been one worthy of the utmost commendation and the officers have in every instance shown their friendship and good will toward the business men of Salem. Thousands of dollars have been distributed in financial circles by their just discrimination in favor of Salem. They found the state eight years ago nearly one million dollars in debt, and in addition to the unusual expenditure of money, in the public buildings they step down and out leaving the state literally free from debt, and its credit A.

1, in business circles.

The state buildings commenced, erected and completed under their united supervision are models of elegance, convenience and durability combined, and are monuments to the honor of the administration now closing. Individually and collectively they bear with them the gratitude and the best wishes of our citizens generally, regardless of politics or party preferences, and we but re-echo the sentiments of the entire community and the state at large when we wish them one and all health, wealth, prosperity and happiness in whatever stations they may hereafter fill in either private or public life.

Capt. N. B. Humphrey is speaker of the third house at Salem.

T. C. Stephens of Lafayette is sergeant at arms of the senate at Salem.

N. B. Davis, of Forest Grove, has received the appointment as clerk of the state board of land commissioners.

Uncle Billy Adams talks about as plain now as he once did through his Oregon city Argus. He thinks it impracticable and impolitic for this state to attempt to exhume and remove the remains of Hon. A. C. Gibbs from London to Oregon.

B. F. Giltner of St. Helens, has the portfolio of assistant secretary of state. Mr. Giltner has been manager of Mr. McBride's business interests at St. Helens for the last ten years, and is a man well qualified for the duties which will devolve upon him in the future.

Hon. J. C. Carson of Multnomah was chosen president of the senate, E. G. Hirsch chief clerk, and C. W. Watts, son of Senator Watts, assistant clerk. The house organized by electing J. T. Gregg of Marion, speaker. A motion to take the appointment of committees out of the hands of the president of the senate was promptly tabled, by the following vote: Ayes, Simon, Watts, Bird, Steel, Barin, Gray, Williams, Shupe, Miller, Cartwright, Siglin, Chandler, Hamilton, Chamberlin—14. Nays, Dawson, Hare, Irvine, J. C. Allen, Cauthorn, Veatch, Looney, Dimick, Weatherford, Wager, Emmett, Rhinehart—12.
