McMinnville, Or. - - Jan. 19, 1887

A railroad man is always known by the way he enters a hotel. He never shuts the door behind him.

Selena writes good sensible words for our legislators to heed, concern amendments to the school law. Peruse it. There is very much truth spoken in those few words.

Thanks to Frank C. Baker, state printer, for valuable favors. For the first time since the formation of the state government at Salem, we have occasion to return compliments to that particular office.

A car load of ducks rewarded a jaunt of G. E. Detmering and friend in a southerly direction yesterday. Considering the day it would be called a very successful hunt; if they'd got the ducks, which are possibly still southward bound.

The Rev. Mr. Monroe, whom it was expected would come to this city to minister for the Christian church, was taken with a very serious attack of malarial fever, before quitting her home in Missouri, and has been compelled to abandon the trip. The house which Judge Cowles was holding for him is now offered for rent to other parties who may wish a desirable home in the city.

At the annual stockholders meeting of the First National bank of McMinnville, held at their banking house in this city, January 18th, 1887, the following directors were elected for the ensuing year: Jacob Wortman, W. D. Fenton, John Wortman, Frank Wortman and H. C. Wortman. At a meeting of the directors, the following officers were elected: Jacob Wortman, President; W. D. Fenton, vice-President; John Wortman, Cashier.

The New York Standard, by Henry George, is at hand. It is a fine specimen of typography, and while its doctrines are of that peculiar kind not calculated to make (rich) men happy, it works to win votes by the bayonet, or under the banner of the dynamite fiend. In short, its editor would have peace, even if he has to fight for it. He has arraigned himself tooth and toenail against the Roman Catholic church, in the support and defence of Dr. McGlynn.

In a few days F. Multner will sell at public auction all the furniture now in use at the St. Charles.

A large number of bills came up yesterday for second reading. It is hardly likely that any committee reports will be seen before the end of the week, so no bills will pass to third reading unless under suspension of the rules, before the coming week. The senate may reach the third reading of bills by the end of the week.

The entrance to San Francisco is worse and worse. A schooner loaded with 100,000 lbs of powder for Portland went on a reef just outside last Thursday, and beating upon the powder exploded Saturday night tumbling the Cliff house into a mass of ruins, and doing other damages. The life saving station and Sutros conservatory was also wrecked. The explosion was distinctly heard one hundred miles.

Gov. Pennoyer is the victim of a great deal of chaffing, good-naturedly given and as good naturedly received. For example, on the evening following the inauguration, Gov. Thayer, speaking to Gov. Pennoyer in the presence of Gov. Moody, said: "Well, Oregon now has no living governor." "How's that?" asked Pennoyer. "Why," replied Thayer, "I died four years ago, Moody died this morning at 11 o'clock, and you killed yourself this afternoon."

The World asked Gov. Pennoyer what would be the probable effect on the country of Conkling's return to the senate. To which he made the following reply: It is my impression that Roscoe Conkling is a man who never has been or never can be the subservient tool of corporate power. Such men, in the present condition of affairs in our country, should be placed in official position by the people.

A few days since as the freight stood at the McMinnville depot sun John's chickens entered an empty grain car and began feeding. Suddenly a train hand discovered that the wind was blowing, and to prevent the cars from being blown from the track south, banged the doors shut all along the line. Sun noticed that his chicks were prisoners and hurriedly sent a man to release them. He secured the poultry at the peril of his life, and the train had was out and injured, according to expectations.

The state pen. will fill up now. Just lots of fellows on the outside will want to get in so as to board with Hon. Robt. Clow, superintendent, and M. J. McKinnon, warden.

F. Multner will open the Central with all new furniture and intends to make of it a first class hotel in all respects. His success at the St Charles is an assurance of the future.

J. Fred Clark, the Portland real estate dealer, has a political bee in his bonnet. Like the interstate commerce bill; it isn't yet sufficiently developed to say just what it will amount to.

Lady clerks are as plentiful as flowers in May about the capitol; as soon as speaker Gregg announced his committee they will hover around the members like bees around a morning glory.

The UPR Co. has revoked the order introducing the twenty-four hour system of counting time. The revocation was somewhat of a surprise. It is said that President Adams distrusted the system, and by his order it was abandoned.

Senator Watts possibly yesterday introduced a revised Keady bill for a liquor law, in the senate, and will urge its consideration at as early a date as possible. At present there is no liquor ordinance on the statute books that amounts to anything.

In Sheridan, on the 26th, an open temperance society was organized, with the following officers: Dr. Jno. Field, president; James Morrison, vice president; J. D. Montgomery, secretary; A. B. Falconer, treasurer; James Townsend, sergeant at arms.

Senate bill No. 10, introduced by Mr. Lee, includes Yamhill among the counties to be reimbursed for delinquent taxes for 1883 and 1885, assessed on mortgages, which taxes were paid into the state treasury and not collected by the counties.

There is much talk favoring a constitutional convention, but it is likely the matter will not meet approval. Numerous amendments to the constitution will be proposed, and next week will prove a busy one in the assembly.

Commenting upon Hon. Roscoe Conkling's chances for the United States senate, the Oregonian says: "Mr. Conkling has not the slightest disposition to return to the field of politics. He has a very large legal practice which he will not abandon until he is in easy financial circumstances.

NEW TO-DAY.
