House bill No. 18, is now in the hands of the committee on counties, Messrs. McCully, Laughlin, Roberts, Wicox and Osborne. They will report it to the house, then it will pass the third reading and go to the senate. It may not be necessary for reference in the senate. We look for a speedy passage of the bill, as it comes from the house.

The fire losses have been adjusted and promptly paid, by the Phoenix and Home, to Wilson Carl on the destruction of his property on the 13th. This is of course satisfactory to him, and an assurance that his faith was properly placed when he insured, but still he is not satisfied, and will pay $500 within six months, for evidence that will convict the incendiary who caused the fire.

C. Grissen keeps a nice lot of shelf paper.

McMinnville is soon to become a manufacturing center. Mr. Smith, the purchaser of the Wright blacksmith shop, opposite the Cook hotel, is a practical man, and has some farm implements of his own invention which he intends to manufacture here, upon a basis which will save to the farmer at least transportation and many agents' commissions. Success attend you Mr. Smith.

There must always be something to act as sand to throw into the eyes of the majority when a minority with a doubtful cause make an effort to win. The sand for this purpose is perhaps the "regulation of its use" more than the width of the draw in the proposed railroad bridge at Portland. Up town property interests had better inquire into this matter.

Sunrise.

Silence profound; then faintly
Low throbbings in the air,
A presence holy, saintly,
Hushed voices breathing prayer.
A wavering light uncertain,
A soft glow spreading wide.
A dusky, sombre curtain
Drawn silently aside.
Pale rays of rare completeness
Far down the sky's dim lawn,
Moist lips of rosy sweetness
Upraised to kiss the dawn.
A sudden burst of rapture
From bird-throats swelling long,
Which echo elves recapture,
And flood the earth with song,
A richer color showing
A flush across the gray,
A deeper carmine glowing,
Night shadows rolled away.
A gleam of polished silver,
A glow of burnished gold,
A liquid mass of splendor,
A glory manifold.
A royal car suspended,
Hung swaying in the blue,
The grand coronation's ended,
And rose tints fade from view.
Oh, human heart, grown tender
With thoughts beyond all speech,
This sunrise scene of splendor
No human art can reach;
Revive hope's blessed story,
Bid faith ascend on high
And view eternal glory,
Where rose tints never die.
—Rose Hartwick Thorpe.

My Queen.

In thought and in dream, I am with thee my Love,
My allegiance alone is thee;
Queen of my heart, forever and now,
Thou art, and thou only shall be.
My mind finds delight in the beautiful
Past,
In the days of our first, early love,
When the moments were fraught with rapturous bliss,
An earnest of Heaven above.
E'en though merciless fate should sever our lives,
And our dreams, dreams only may be,
Yet, Queen of my heart, forever and now,
Thou art, and thou only shall be.
