"A H."

Who signs his name in letters great?

A. H.

And raises a dirty mess in the state?

A. H.

Who'll some day surely meet a fate?

A. H.

By being lammed up severely straight

A. H.

Against some roughly moulded stake?

A. H.

And left there in the sun to bake—

This man who signs himself

A. H.

Snow all gone.

What is courtesy?

Don't be a clam!

Posters for the Firemen's fair are out.

One or two sleighs were in town yesterday.

Hugh Collard arrived home on Thursday morning.

Geo. Smith, a farmer living near Oswego, is missing.

Pastures green; so's ye local, as far as news is concerned.

Some one left a five gallon oil can at the Eurisko market. Come and get it, quick.

Miss Cora Wallace has accepted a position in the Telephone office, as a disciple to the "messengers leaden and dumb."

Our "devil and pressman" was violently attacked with a shock of otia, and we had a monkey and a parrot time getting out this issue.

C. A. Wallace yesterday sold his fine eight months-old Holstein calf to S. Porter of Mill creek, Polk county. Consideration $155.

"A Tale of Forty-Nine" written by Mrs. C. M. Kirkwood, begins with this issue. It is a narrative of thrilling interest, and will amply repay perusal.

The Portland News says it's got the facts concerning the Wagner-Siglin controversy, and will tell the truth when the time comes, "a saying of no names, Sarah, etc."

There is nothing like printer's ink. An Illinois man advertised for a wife and caught one with a $10,000 bank account. The Reporter's advertising rates will be found elsewhere in this paper.

The steamer Bentley has received all needed repairs, and now lays at the foot of Main street, says the Telegram, waiting for the river to lower enough to pass through the locks. The expense of repairing was about $1,500.

The question before the people is: "Can you stay with it if you catch on?"

St. Nicholas for February is a splendid number. This magazine, like wine, improves with age.

Moss Rose is the name of another high-toned club in Portland. How'd boiled cabbage sound?

The O. & C. east side train was delayed twelve hours at Oakland. Cause: engine jumped the track.

Thos. Stevens the bicyclist was made an honorary member of the Portland club and presented with a medal.

The ferry boats in Portland are having a rough time of it with high water. All the more need of a bridge.

One week ago Saturday, two students of the Indian School at Chemawa disappeared, and started for the habitation of their fathers in eastern Oregon. They were captured at Hood river.

The last will of the late Edward Cahalin, one of the oldest boot and shoe dealers in Portland, who died December 16, 1886, devises to his wife all property, real or personal, for her own use during her life. At her death the estate shall go to the children, Edward Hugh, Catherine Ellen, Gertrude Mary and John Francis, share and share alike.

The rains of Saturday night and Sunday caused the river to make a sudden upward bound, besides thoroughly soaking and softening the earth everywhere. Upon examination the morning of the 26th, it was discovered that the above causes had resulted in some small damage to the bulkhead at the east end of the big bridge across the Willamette at Salem. This bulkhead is some 60 feet in length and built against the bank to protect it from the high water. It is anchored back into the bank with iron rods attached to wooden posts or piles. In planting these posts, a continuous trench was dug the entire length of the bulkhead. This so weakened the embankment that it has caved outward, causing the bulkhead to bulge riverwards, from six to twelve inches, with some danger of its going clear over into the river. To avoid such a catastrophe, the street Commissioner has gone to work with a force of men, to set in a row of piling, some twenty-five feet further in shore, from which iron rods will be attached to the bulkhead, thus securing it from further damage.

Wednesday evening the beautiful snow descended and covered the earth to a depth of two inches. During Thursday it was turned into a light rain. Indications for storm of some severity are good, that is if you'll wait long enough.

A Correction.

Owing to miss placing of the line "To Portland" and "From Portland," over the narrow gauge schedule yesterday, the sense of the meaning was changed a few. This morning it comes forth in correct form.
