THE REPORTER BY STEAM.

This is bad weather for building, but so soon as men can work to advantage, up goes the new Reporter office building on Third St., next to Henderson's Bros. livery stable, where our presses will be run by steam. After that we shall have something of interest TO SAY TO OUR PATRONS.

COOK'S HOTEL.

January 3d, we mentioned the fact that our fellow townsman, L. H. Cook, had nearly completed his fine brick hotel in this city, and that McMinnville soon could boast of a caravansary without its superior in Oregon. This fine hotel has now been open to the reception of guests about two weeks. It is as finely finished and furnished, and as suitably arranged for the accommodation of the traveling public as any hotel of its size west of the Mississippi valley. It is centrally located in the city, convenient for business of all kinds, and has the most cheerful apartments throughout. The house is brick, three stories, 50x50 feet, surrounded by all modern means that can contribute to the comfort of the public. In the construction of Cook's Hotel no pains nor expense has been spared in any way by the enterprising owner to assure the comfort of patrons, and in the construction of the building, as well as in the furnishing, Mr. Cook has confined himself as much as possible to home manufactures, dealers and mechanics. The plans were drawn by B. F. Fuller; the brick work was done by Tyler & Saylor; the painting and finishing and paper hanging by G. V. Snelling; the plumbing, roofing door and window caps and cornice work by Hodsons; carpenter work by Chas. R. Cook; doors, windows, blinds, etc., by Geo. W. Jones & Co.; lathing and plastering by E. S. Cooper; furnishing mostly by E. B. Fellows. The foundation is a solid concrete wall, 30 inches wide by 12 inches thick, all around the outside, and center piers. The exterior presents a solid and substantial appearance "from the ground up," but its greatest attraction is the interior, partly described in a former issue of The Reporter. The elegant parlor is the attraction on the second floor. It is handsomely carpeted, has a rich chandelier, and the walls are decorated with works of art from the pencils of Misses Eva and May, daughters of the liberal and generous host. In fact many of the rooms throughout the building have been thus decorated by these accomplished young ladies. The Bridal Chamber, next to the parlor, is a luxurious apartment. There are thirteen other handsomely furnished rooms on this floor, including the private parlors, and home like family apartments. Up the next flight, which take us to the third floor, we find 14 neat and tastily furnished rooms, making in all 28 chambers. Descending to the lower floor we turn to the right and find the dining room, large, comfortable and cheery, with tables provided with all that evidence the ability of Mr. Cook, and stamp him as a man who most assuredly "knows how to keep a hotel" right well. To the left is the office, as cosy a place as ever weary traveler divested himself of over coat for refreshing rest. This apartment is presided over by C. H. Cook, as obliging clerk as ever passed a pen across the face of a register. By the way, a glance at the register shows a goodly patronage already. The Billiard hall is under the very capable and efficient management of Wm. E. Martin, which is a guarantee of satisfactory catering in that line. This room and the hall and dining room are fair samples of the decorative ability of Mr. Snelling, who is certainly a first class artist. It is next to impossible to portray on paper, in the shape of a published article like this, the many fine points which will make Cook's hotel as popular as the leading hotels of all other cities. The sample room for commercial travelers, and every other modern convenience, attest the good sense and executive ability of Mine Host Cook, and we wish him unbounded success in this new enterprise, which is about as gratifying to every resident of Yamhill county as it can be to the traveling public who desire first class accommodations.
