An imported Jersey hog was dressed at Ben Hartman's place in this city to-day, which looked like a sack of wool after it was slung up by the block and tackle. It weighed not less than 550 lbs. Was four years old.

Where there has been neglect to provide feed, losses to stock has been large the past winter for Oregon, yet we presume to say that not a single sheep died in this valley that cannot be traced to direct and almost criminal carelessness.

Miss F. E. Russ has prepared a fine scrap book in elegant souvenir style for her trade, into which all the elaborate cards and fashion plates sent to her from importing and jobbing millinery houses is to be preserved.

Gov. Penoyer's refusal to recognize a claim to a parcel of swamp-land in Southern Oregon, based on one of Hon. Owen's alleged titles, shows that this administration is doing the work of honesty that ought to have been undertaken eight years ago and pursued ever since. The governor's letter in the Oregonian to-day is sufficiently explicit and decisive.

The president is alleged to have said recently to a California republican that he did not expect to appoint a Pacific coast man on the inter state railway commission. One will be from New England, one from New York or a Middle state, another from Ohio or Indiana, the fourth from the Northwest—Wisconsin, Iowa or Minnesota—and the fifth from the South. There are over 400 applications.

The real estate men of Portland are all preparing for the liveliest times witnessed in many years. There is no immigration board to stand in the way of individual enterprise, and the new comers can make choice of their own agents. The immigration board has been a detriment to a certain extent to Multnomah, and other portions of the state.

Senator Dolph some time ago wrote a letter from Washington to the state board of immigration in regard to obtaining a quantity of barley to be used for seeding purposes. It seems that the Austrian minister at the national capitol desired to secure a quantity of the very best quality to send to his government, and has applied to Senator Dolph. In turn, Mr. Dolph referred the matter to the board of immigration. He wrote that 1000 kilogrammes (about 2500 pounds) were desired. The secretary wrote Senator Dolph that the quantity of grain desired could be furnished from this state. This letter the senator gave to the Austrian minister who forwarded it to his government. The Austrian government authorized a prominent firm at Wishau in Bohemia, to make the application for the grain. Samples of barley have already been received from Walla Walla, eastern Oregon and this valley. The amount required will be collected in a few days and will probably be shipped for its destination some time during next week. It is desirable on the part of the government to change the seed in Bohemia, and to introduce new grain from America. This change, it is thought, will result in a larger average yield. Oregon has been selected as the state from which the new barley shall come. Peg again for Webfoot?
