Special Elections

Some of our cotemporaries appear to be muddled over the special elections to occur in Oregon next November. Simply stated, this is all there is of it: "There will be a special election in this state on the 15th of next November on which day the people will vote on three proposed amendments to the constitutions of the state. 1. Prohibiting the sale and manufacture of liquors. 2. Raising the salaries of state officers; 3rd, changing the time of holding the general election from June to November."

Editing A Newspaper

It does not seem possible for an editor in these days to "please everybody." We found a democrat in Lafayette last Saturday who criticised the Reporter for saying recently that "Gov. Penoyer is proving himself to be governor in earnest and no mistake. Swindles of every kind will stand slim show during his administration;" and here comes a republican (so-called) who puts in his protest because we said that "Senator Mitchell's attitude on the interstate commerce bill has been criticised by persons who are always ready to find fault with our representatives abroad, while in total ignorance of the circumstances that move them to action." Both were honestly and faithfully stated as candid matters of fact, and we are here to defend not only this but every other similiar statement emanating from this pen.

The sequel of "Orna, the Child of Sorrow," appears in this issue of the Daily Reporter, and will be continued until completed. It is a fitting ending for the many trials that fell to her lot, and shows how heroically a woman can suffer and endure.

At a recent exhibition in England, where prizes were given for walking horses, the speed attained was over five miles an hour.

Glandered Horses.

Discussing the sickness among horses so prevalent just now in Yamhill county, one of our leading farmers, Hon. J. J. Henderson remarked that the great cause of so much blind staggers, was owing to great neglect on the part of owners feeding fern hay. He is an advocate of clean oats, straw, plenty of salt, fresh water and grooming, and his stock shows that it is good. Concerning glanders in horses, a Polk county correspondent says: Would it not be a good plan and does not the law compel persons who have glandered horses to kill and bury them, or destroy in some way, so that they will be out of the way of other stock running at large, or in the same enclosure where a diseased animal is located? We are all aware that there are glandered horses not many miles from here and that in several instances they had to be killed, and in one instance report has it on reliable authority dogs and chickens died from eating of the carcass of one of these dead animals. They suffered all the symptoms of a glandered horse. Farmers, would it not be well to look into this matter of glanders. It is surprising to a person who has given this matter a thought at the extent the disease has spread in the last few years, and it has all sprung from a delicacy on the part of the people to enforce the law and compel persons who have such horses to dispose of them in the proper way.

Art Gallery.

ED. REPORTER:—The seventh annual firemen's fair held at Garrison's Opera house last week, was in every way a most enjoyable and successful affair and a credit to the managing committee.

There was, however, connected with it one feature, deserving of special mention, and that was the Art Gallery. Aside from the revenue derived by the Fire Department, it afforded the people a splendid opportunity to view of paleological and mineral specimens, rare curiosities and relics of various kinds. The collection of Mr. J. E. Brooks deserves special mention. It is rare and valuable, and the owner may be justly proud of it.

The paintings and crayon drawings exhibited by local artists would be a credit to art galleries in larger cities. Several pieces show talent of the highest order, much to the surprise of your correspondent who has visited art galleries in many large cities. Such work is not only deserving words of encouragement but liberal patronage as well. Why buy cheap chromos when we can get home productions greatly superior in merit for but little more, and very often the same price, at the same time encouraging art and artists at home?

It was through this kind of encouragement that California to-day proudly claims one of the foremost living painters, Toby E. Rosenthol, painter of the famous "Elaine" picture.

It is to be hoped that the good people who managed the art gallery this year may continue in the good work, and make the exhibition of art work an annual occurrence. Z.
