McMinnville, Or. - - Mch. 14, 1887

The death of Capt. James B. Eads, occurred at Nashua, N. H., on the 6th. Capt. Eads was an engineer of great energy and ability, and one whom the Nation can ill afford to lose.

Hon. C. B. Watson is addressing interested audiences at Walla Walla, Pendleton, and elsewhere, on the proposed road round the Cascades and the overcoming of the obstructions in the upper Columbia.

Christine Nilson was married last week in Paris. This announcement is most likely only another way of stating that another great songstress has fallen into the hands of an unprincipled and mercenary fellow.

Samuel Taylor, the man injured by the accident to the steam launch New York last week, died at the hospital. An investigation of the disaster will take place in a few days, this death making a serious phase of the case. Mr. Taylor was a resident of this county.

That is a queer story that comes from Washington about the president's actress cousin. She is twenty years old, is a graduate of the Cincinnati college of music, "but for the last fifteen years has lived with her mother in Chicago." How long she has been on the stage is not stated. Here are problems for the arithmetic man that beat figuring out the result of an election.

John P. Lucas, who resides a mile from Palouse city, is the father of thirty-three children, and claims to be the champion father of the world. Quality rather than quantity suggests the Telegram, is the basis of genuine pride in a matter of this kind. There are plenty of people in the world, so far as that goes, without such a wholesale record as this.

Among the things expected of the new postmaster at east Portland, are that he shall get all letters, parcels and garden seeds in on time, mails or no mails, answer insolence with a stony stare, and smile serenely at boldly implied doubts as to his honesty.

Being a sensible man he will probably do what he considers to be his duty to the best of his ability, and like his predecessor, let the growl go unanswered.

Edwin Booth, nor the best living talent, could not have been tendered a more heartfelt ovation than that which greeted the Emma Heath Dramatic company at Garrison Opera house Saturday night. The dress circle fairly sparkled with the wit, wisdom and worth of our best society, and even the gallery was crowded with intelligent and appreciative people. The play was rendered in superb style, with spirit, and a faultless elegance.

Miss Mattie Mitchell, the pretty daughter of Oregon's Senator, is the heroine of a pretty little romance. A newspaper correspondent described her at the theater recently, when she appeared in a grey plush cloak, as resembling "a maltese kitten by moonlight," and an admirer of the young lady soon after sent her, accompanied by the printed paragraph, a moonstone carved to represent the head of a kitten, with small emerald eyes, caught in the arm of a crescent moon made of diamonds. The unique and graceful ornament is now constantly worn by Miss Mitchell.

People may be interested in knowing, in view of the ORN lease by the UPR, that the industries of Omaha, largely through the traffic and influence of the latter railway company, increased during the decade between 1875-85 from $5,800,000 $22,815,000 annually. These industries comprise smelting and refining ores, manufacture of railway machinery, hardware, etc., the lumber trade and wood manufacture. There are vast possibilities in all of these lines for Portland. There is at least a reasonable hope that the next ten years will change many of these into facts.

Henry Ward Beecher throughout his life deprecated and protested against the use of crape and heavy black drapings in token of mourning. His family respected his wishes in this regard, and the ordinary trappings of woe were not indulged by them. Instead of the usual knot of crape on the door announcing that death was present within, a wreath of flowers, daily supplanted by a fresh garland was used. There was no black drapings about the house or church. The public however, followed out its own idea in the matter, and buildings all over the city of Brooklyn showed the usual sable emblems of sorrow pending the funeral.

Lime water and milk are a good aid to the digestion of grown people as well as food for infants. The lime water may be made by putting a few lumps of unslaked lime in a stone jar and adding water until the lime is slaked and of about the consistency of thick cream; the lime settling and leaving the pure and clean lime water on top.
