A Tale.

An orange rind on the pavement,
Sent the lawyer head over heel;
He split his doeskin trowsers—
He shook up his morning meal;
While the wreck of his new "Prince Albert,"
Wouldn't tempt a tramp to steal;
So he suddenly said to his tailor,
I've lost a suit on appeal.

Death of Wm. L. Bodle.

The sudden death of Wm. L. Bodle, at Carlton yesterday, from heart disease contracted while in the army, has cast a gloom over that community. It appears that he was stricken while at work putting in a gate upon his premises. The body was still warm, when discovered but no one saw him fall. The funeral will take place at two p. m. to-morrow. Mr. Bodle was a native of Ohio, aged 62 years, and leaves a most estimable wife, three sons, and a daughter, Mrs. A. P. Wilson. He served through the army of the rebellion with distinction, and removed to Oregon from Nebraska for his health, about three years since. He was a member of Corinth Post, G. A. R., of Genoa, Nebraska.
