STINGINESS.

Think This Over. Then Talk About It.

Did you ever, says the Future, stop to think why it is that nearly all newspapers work for monopolists as against the farmers and other laborers? The reason is simple. It is because the mass of gamblers and monopolists are great readers and take a great many papers. A newspaper soon learns what sort of people will patronize it and does not work against that class to the favor of others which give a stingy support. The great railroad monopolists know that a great many farmers are so stingy that they will not take more than one paper, therefore they have indirectly bought up nearly all the great city papers. They put the price down to cost or less and issue large sheets of sixteen to twenty-four pages. The farmer sees that he gets a large amount of reading cheap, and he takes one of those papers only, to the exclusion of his county paper, very often. He is not conscious of the fact that he is falling into the trap the monopolists have set for him, and that expert editors are employed to stuff, cram and feed him with taffy and soup, so that he will vote for monopoly while hurrahing for anti-monopoly. Jay Gould and other monopolists do not care how much money they sink in these metropolitan papers. They know they will get it back with compound interest in other ways. Their main object is to crush out all local papers and then they alone will make American ideas for their victims. They know that the natural stinginess of most of their victims will lead them into the net. While this is going on, the papers, like the Reporter, which are honestly working in the interest of the farmers, laborers and country merchants, are starved out. If farmers, laborers and such merchants as believe in the schemes of Gould, Phil Armour and the Standard oil company, would give the large city papers a severe letting alone they would soon find hundreds of dollars flowing into their pockets for every one paid out for papers that work in their interest. Jay Gould knew perfectly well that the press rules the country, or he would not have invested so many millions of dollars in the associated press and in the telegraph lines, even resorting to anarchy in crushing out lines which he could not buy. A man is a fool that can't see that.

Let us remember that a well will drain an area with a diameter equal to twice its depth. Therefore, a well twelve feet deep will drain an area the diameter of which is twenty-four feet; that is to say that it will drain the surrounding soil for twelve feet in every direction. Obviously, then, the privy should be more than the depth of the well away from it, and more than this again if it is proposed to place it on a higher level, which, however, should never be done. The well should be lined inside thoroughly with mortar, so that the percolation cannot occur between the crevices of the bricks, and it should be well covered, so that surface drainage cannot get into it, for you want to drink water that has come into the well from the bottom, after it has been purified by filtration through the earth; these are the precautions to be observed in locating and building your well in the country. How about the city? Well water in the city should never be used; the sources of contamination are too numerous and hidden to be avoided.

The supplanting of the narrow by the standard gauge width of railroad tracks goes on quietly but steadily. Attention is called to the gradual extinction of the narrow gauge system at the south, where at one time it was preferred to the broad gauge. Narrow gauge roads of Texas were left without an outlet last year. It seems only a question of a short time, when the narrow gauge railroad will have disappeared.

One way to encourage manufacturing industries to come to your city is to patronize those already here. One way to induce us to patronize those already here is for them to try and deserve patronage.
