YAMHILL REPORTER PUBLISHING CO.

McMinnville, Or. - Aug. 13, 1887

CITY.

There are 1,000 men now at work on the OP extension.

At the railroad disaster near Chatsworth, Ill., one hundred and eighty were killed and four hundred wounded.

Additional names are received daily for the WEEKLY REPORTER. This is evidence that it is appreciated as a newspaper.

S. G. Reed, of Portland, has sold his mining property for $2,999,980, a gain of nearly $2,000,000 over purchase price.

D. C. Ireland is in the city. He has purchased the Albany Bulletin press, which will be shipped to Astoria for his forthcoming Pioneer. His job presses are now at work.

The story of "Oliver Delaplaine," by Edgar Fawcett, will be continued in the forthcoming number of The American Magazine. The affairs of the heroine are evidently nearing a crisis.

Don't fill the system with quinine, to prevent or cure fever and ague. Ayers' Ague cure is the specific for this disease, and leaves no poisons to produce dizziness, deafness, headache or other disorders.

Owing to an unusual rush of business yesterday, the article on editorial page entitled "Traitors," got somewhat mixed. The error was discovered and corrected when the edition was about half off. Errors will occur.

Young, old and middle aged, all experience the wonderfully beneficial effects of Ayers' Sarsaparilla. Young children suffering from sore eyes, sore ears, scald head, or with any scrofulous taint, become healthy and strong by the use of this medicine. Six bottles, $5.

Hon. Matthew Deady, of the United States District court will, lecture at Garrison Opera house, Friday evening Aug. 19th, for the benefit of the Guild society of St. James Episcopal church, on "Law and Lawyers." This eminent jurist is a favorite both east and west, and old Yamhill, the home of his boyhood, should give him a warm welcome. Admission 25 cts.

Mrs. D. A. Wallace, Mrs. E. B. Fuller and Mrs. Carl Wallace honored this office with a pleasant call yesterday. We were shown photographs of the great ice gorge on the Missouri river near the large railroad bridge that spans that river at Mandan, Dakota, and in which, for four days, they were isolated from the busy world.

In these days of yatching it is expedient to know something of the language of the sea. A paper by Lieut. F. S. Bassatt, U. S. N., in the forthcoming number of the The American Magazine, gives the curious names (with hints at their derivation) by which sailors designate the various parts of a ship and her riggings.

E. B. Fellows has just received another car load of furniture, consisting of elegant bed room sets and comfortable office chairs, two of which will grace the sanctum of the REPORTER, with the compliments of E. B. Fellows. In the quiet stillness of eve we shall throw ourselves with great abandonment into this luxurious receptacle for weary feet that have "clim" the golden stairs all day long.

All persons in McMinnville having approved bills against D. C. Ireland, will please present them to Yamhill Reporter Publishing Company for settlement.

J. H. Lambert returned to Portland to-day.

D. C. Ireland and family left for Astoria to-day.

Our San Francisco Letter.

Special Correspondence. SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10.

The grim faces of the officials in the city prison are, erroneously, supposed never to relax into a smile, but a few days ago regulation gravity gave way a little when, at the early dawn of morning, the bell rang, and a man with a terribly amazed countenance presented himself and asked to be allowed to enter and to have his wounds dressed. He said his name was Macbeth, and that about an hour previously he had quarreled with a man named MacDuff, and challenged the latter to "lay on." This, MacDuff had done to such good purpose, that before Macbeth could cry "Hold! Enough!" he was stretched senseless on sidewalk. When he recovered consciousness he was covered with blood and bruises, and MacDuff, holding that to the victor belonged the spoils, had mulcted him in the sum of seventeen dollars and appropriated his silver watch and chain. "Stands Scotland where she did?" quoted a Shakespeare-loving officer, "or has she come to California?" Macbeth's injuries were attended to, but MacDuff is still at large.

Strangers in San Francisco notice, with some surprise, that not only on the stalls in the markets, but displayed in the windows of the restaurants, are piles of large eggs, broad at one end and narrow at the other, and covered with ugly, black blotches. They are sea gull eggs, taken from the thousands of nests on the Farallones Islands; where these birds go in the breeding season. The right to collect these eggs has been sold by the state government to certain parties, who send schooners thers to bring them to the market, but the government lighthouse keeper looks upon the sea gull's nesting-place as a sort of arial poultry yard which nobody but himself has a right to invade. He not only takes all the eggs he can get, but disputes the passage of the crews of the schooners to the building places. The price of the eggs in the market are only twenty-five cents a dozen, and in the restaurants they can be had, cooked in all sorts of ways; but it requires culinary art of a very high order indeed to make them palatable.

All day long a crowd of sight-seers is flowing into a building at the corner of Mason and Eddy streets. They remain there for perhaps half an hour, and come out with bewilderment written upon their countenances as they watch the peaceful traffic in the city. Because standing upon upon the roof of a battle-scarred house, they have just been thried by "the proud control of fierce and bloody war." It is, to be sure, only a panorama of the famous battles of Vicksburg that they have looked upon, but the optical delusions are so perfect that veteran's who participated in Grant's great assault on May 22, 1863, stand amazed and wonder what they are doing on the roof of a house, as idle spectators, when they might be rendering service on the hard-fought battle-field below.

Lunch parties are becoming very fashionable in San Francisco. They have, certainly, all the elements of early dinner, but early dinners have long ago been ruled out of good society, and the so-called lunch conveniently fills the hiatus. Dinner parties have become affairs of too pronounced ceremony for the residents of this genial clime where the balmy evenings are too valuable to be frittered away between soup and coffee.

There will be a grand bonfire in the custom house in a few days, and six hundred pounds of opium, that might have made many thousands of Chinese (and white men, too) happy in forgetfulness, will be burned, as an offering to Morpheus. This opium represents only a small part of the seizures made, for illicit importation, during the past half year. It is crude, and containing less than nine per cent. of morphia, cannot, under a national law, be sold for medicinal uses.

An order just issued by the police commissioner will make it useless hereafter for any officer who has been reported for needlessly entering a liquor saloon while on duty to apply for leave to absent himself from his post on the plea of sickness, even though a medical certificate endorses his petition. The supposition being that his intemperance has caused his illness, though racked with aches and pains he must patrol his beat, or make room for a man who will do so.

A lot of new job type just received to the Reporter job rooms.

Headache

Often indicates derangement of the digestive and assimilating organs. Persons afflicted with this distressing complaint may be relieved by the use of Ayer's Pills.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for Headache, to which I am predisposed, and they invariably relieve me of all pain." C. Webber, Manchester, N.H.

"Ayer's Pills are the best remedy I ever used for the cure of Sick Headache. They help me when all other remedies fail." Ida Skinner, 204 Thirtieth st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

"Ayer's Pills invariably cure me of the headache." John Stell, Germantown, Pa.

"I have suffered for years from Sick Headache, and have never found a remedy like for sure and speedy relief." R. M. Coan, Rockford, Ill.

PREPARED BY Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.
