Night Hog Feeding Shows Good Results

Experiment May Prove Useful During Summer

What is believed to have been the first experiment in night feeding of hogs indicates that this practice may prove highly practical, at least during the summer months. The experiment was conducted by Robert C. Turner, a Henry, Ill., farmer, who produced an average gain of 92 pounds each on a herd of 107 Duroc hogs he had on his night-feeding program for 63 days. To encourage his pigs to eat during the cool of the night when they were reluctant to eat during the heat of the summer days, Turner erected lights in his hog lot. He had a time clock control set to switch the lights on for two night feedings, from 10 to 11:30 p. m. and from 2 to 3:30 a. m. One pole with a single 150-watt bulb and another pole with two 150-watt bulbs lighted the hog lot area, while a third pole with two 150-watt bulbs lighted the self-feeders. Turner fed a ration of ground oats and a pelleted milk product in the self-feeders, hand fed ear corn, and provided mineral, salt and good alfalfa pasture. His 107 pigs, farrowed in late March and early April, weighed in for the test at 7,424 pounds, or an average of 69.38 pounds each. They weighed out at 17,270 pounds, or an average of 161.4 pounds each. This meant a total gain of 9,846 pounds of pork, about 92 pounds per pig, or an average daily gain of about 1.45 pounds per pig. The herd consumed a total of 27,069 pounds of feed at a cost of $1,069.91. According to these figures Turner produced his gain at the rate of 275 pounds of feed for each 100 pounds of pork, or a feed cost of about $1.70 for each hundred weight. The experiment used 148 kilowatt hours of electricity at a cost of $7.40, or about seven cents per pig.

Plush Age on Farm

The future living quarters for Bos sie and Dobbin may still be a far cry from farmhouse comforts and big-city penthouse plush, but at least some of them will have air conditioning, in the interests of more milk and better livestock health. A new barn humidity control system which will reduce excessive barn moisture to levels that will do away with decay, rusting and mildewing equipment, and losses due to spoiled animal feed, bacteria and insanitary conditions, has been put on the market. The new system will automatically control fans and other devices for reducing excessive animal-produced moisture which in winter often reaches 100 per cent saturation.

Contour-Seeded Fields Produce Larger Crops

Contour-seeded wheat fields produce larger crops than those seeded up and down the slope, according to recent expert reports. Increases of two to three bushels an acre have been reported on contour-seeded wheat fields in many instances. Also, in addition to producing bigger yields, wheat fields seeded in this manner erode less. It takes little extra time to plow, disc and seed on the contour.

Fluorine Checks Decay

A group of men working with hydrofluoric acid in an atomic energy project have been found to have unusually healthy teeth, the Journal of the American Dental Association says.

The phenomenon is cited as additional evidence that fluorine is valuable in preventing dental decay.

The workmen laboring continuously in an atmosphere laden with acid fumes were found to have less than half the number of dental fillings as others in the same plant not exposed to the fumes.
