as a swspapers over recent weeks have urged citizens to regwill 15% a somehow seemed a long way in the future. You as citizens hosy caring for the things that demanded attention. It is only o put off the thing that demands the least. You have absorbed all e publicity with the intention that you will register.

The expression remains a timely one: this saying of "Its Later Than You Think". Next Tuesday will be here and will soon join the ranks of yesterdays. You will join the ranks of the unregistered.

Think of it this way if you will. If every citizen in our nation responded to their governmental rights in the same manner as you, what would our nation, state, or city be like today? Because of the basic honesty of people you would never shirk your duty to your community and country with any intention of doing so. The crime of neglect, however, gives no recognition to good intentions.

To be sure it will take some effort to register. But a free government of the people, and by the people is worth much more effort than registration will take.

How late is it? Very late indeed. Tuesday the 18th is the deadline to register for the primaries. Why not take care of your share. Register

Thousands Still Die

America's death toll from motor vehicle accidents dropped again in 1949. In their 1950 book of street and highway accident data, The Travelers Insurance companies record a total of 31,800 fatalities last year, compared with 32,200 in 1948. The decrease is encouraging in view of an increase of

The dancer wasn't a Catholic. but she was touched by the present anyhow. And six weeks later, thanks to faith or the new sulfa drugs, she was out of the hospital.

FROM THEN ON, she kept the rosary in her make-up box, but a couple of years later, after a succession of cheap variety houses and even cheaper hotels, the beads no longer seemed very important. And one day, when one of the girls in her vaudeville unit asked about Christopher medal, Jean said, "It's nothing at all. Just a piece of old junk. I don't know why I keep on carrying it."

That Sunday, when the troupe checked into a Baltimore botel, Jean put the make-up case on top of her valise and signed the register, but when she reached for her luggage the case was gone. She notified the desk and, when that didn't produce results, reported the loss to the police. But when the unit pulled out of Baltimore on Saturday night, neither case nor beads had been found.

In Pittsburgh the next week, the show got bad notices and folded, and as if that weren't enough, the manager skipped with the salaries. A few days later, down to her last three bucks, Jean considered herself plenty lucky when a local agent offered her a job in a Miami nightclub. She was given a ticket-car car 16.

16, berth No. 1-on the 7:22 out of

At 7 o'clock the dancer left the notel, but a couple of blocks from the depot she noticed something on the sidewalk and picked it up. It was a string of rosary beads and, attached to it, a medallion of St Christopher.

JEAN DIDN'T KNOW then, and she doesn't know now, whether it was the same rosary. She did know, however, that it looked exactly like the one the little girl had sent her, except for one thing the chain had been broken. As she continued onto the station, she got to thinking of the beads-how sick she had been when she first got them, and how her troupe had been stranded when she had referred to the medallion as a piece of old junk. And suddenly it seemed important to get the chain fixed

Up the street there was a combination bock shop-jewelry store and, forgetting the 7:22, she walked in. The jeweler worked as fast as be could, but when be banded the rosary back to ber the clock said 7:30, and the dancer knew she was out of a job again.

With less than a dollar in her, ourse, she went back to the hotel. and a few minutes later the phone rang. It was the stage manager of The Student Prince" which, for he umpteenth time, was playing the Nixon theater. "Heard your troup was stranded," he said. One of our dancers is getting married tomorrow, and if you want o fill in for a few weeks-

And now for as corny a finish as ver found its way into a so-called ep column. When Jean picked up a newspaper the next morning, she read that the 7:22 out of Pittsburgh had been side-swiped by a freight car. It wasn't much of a wrecknobody had been hurt because the two berths which were bashed in happened to be empty. One of them, of course, was berth No 1, about eight percent in the number of cars on the road and an increase of about five percent in gasoline consumption.

A closer look at the accident facts, however, is not so encouraging. There were 93,000 more persons injured last year than in 1948. A decrease in deaths in 1949 affords scant satisfaction with the realization that more than a million and a half Americans were hurt during the same period. No one knows how many of these injuries would have been fatalities except for prompt, expert medical attention. Nor does anyone know how many of those who were injured will spend the rest of their lives under physical handicaps that rival death itself as tragedies.

We who drive-and walk-along the nation's streets and highways are responsible for the record. We ARE the record. We must accept this awesome responsibility by driving and walking carefully.

BIG BILLS!

True, that "little illness" you've been mentioning in an ofihand way, may nay seem to amount to much-just a few faint symptoms. But, neglected, these "little ills" can lead to big bills for doctors, medicines, etc; not to mention needless suffering and loss of precious time.

Consult a Doctor now—you'll save by it in the end.

Gabby Enjoys Going to The Dentist

One of my molars was giving me a bad time Tuesday afternoon, so I slipped over to Doc Jones, hoping to catch him free. When I arrived, Gabby Jackson was sitting there stand, but if Gabby-or anyone reading a magazine. I said hello to Gabby and he nodded.

Doc comes out and says I'm next. "Wait a minute," I says. (My tooth seemed to have stopped aching.) "How about Gabby - doesn't he have an appointment?" Doc smiles and says, "Gabby? Why, he's got right and the other wrong? the finest teeth in the county. He just comes up here and reads the magazines whenever he's in town!"

As Doc went to work he told me that he's glad to have Gabby come up and read magazines . . . they might not all be fresh off the news wants to while away some time who is he to stand in their way?

From where I sit, this "live and let live" spirit helps make America what it is. If I prefer a friendly glass of beer with my supper and you prefer milk-who's to say one's
