

Book Shelf to Detroit High School

An entirely new method of teaching high school students facts about the region's greatest industry — lumber and forest products—has been introduced to schools of this county. A 12-volume Lumber Book Shelf, containing the finest books published on lumber, logging, forestry and natural history, has been presented recently to school libraries by local forest products firms.

This new educational technique has already attracted national interest. More than 275 Oregon and Washington high schools, libraries and colleges have received the Lumber Book Shelves, gifts of nearby firms. National magazines have featured the plan for presenting a complete package of background information on a single industry.

The Lumber Book Shelf has been presented to Detroit high school by Idanha Lumber Co., Idanha Shingle Co., Idanha Veneer Co., Pamela Lumber Co., and Harvey Lumber Co.

The books have been carefully selected by a committee of leading northwest educators and provide local students with a wide range of authentic knowledge of the lumber and forest products industry. These books will be particularly helpful to students who annually participate in statewide essay and oratorical contests as well as for general reference and study.

The Lumber Book Shelf is part of the West Coast Lumbermen's association educational program developed in co-operation with its member mills and includes specialized booklets on this region in addition to the large books.

These books will remain a permanent part of the school libraries, local lumbermen indicated. "It is our hope," they said, "that students will learn many facts about this industry from these well-selected volumes. As new and up-to-date books are published, we plan on adding to the shelf to keep it abreast of new developments."
