Teamsters Smash Operations 30-0 In Pitchers Duel

DETROIT DAM LEAGUE

League Standings:	W	L	Pct.
Teamsters	5	1	.833
REOS	5	1	.833
CBI Engineers	4	2	.666
Shavers	2	3	.400
Detroit	1	5	.167
Operations	1	6	.143

Mill City's Teamsters in the Detroit Dam league smothered the Operations club Tuesday under a barrage of base hits and excellent pitching to rack up a merciless 30 to 0 victory.

The win enabled the Teamsters to keep pace with the REOS in the battle for the league lead.

Mel La Vine pitched a two-hit game while his mates were collecting 37.

Time and Trees---

We sat there on a log that had been a seedling over 1,200 years ago. Billy Entwistle, once a bullteam logger helped a nine-year-old Cub Scout nail up a "Keep Green" sign on the dead forest giant, and I thought of the meaning of time. Around the log were firs and hemlocks about 20 years old.

We were in the midst of an area that contained 75,000 acres of second and third growth forest.

Billy was telling the Cub Scouts that they should live to see the

It was the second shut out for the Teamsters.

Two Teamsters collected five hits, Carlton and Hamby. Four others collected four hits apiece. Each of thirteen Teamsters participating in the game collected hits.

The Teamsters biggest inning was the second when they collected eight runs.

It was the second disastrous defeat the Operations had absorbed in the past week.

Last Thursday on the Mill City Diamond, the CBI Engineers won their first game in three starts by downing the Operations nine, 16-7.

Operations led off with a flying start by getting six runs the first inning. They were able to hit Roberts, the Engineers starting pitcher. Errors in the infield helped them garner the runs.

The six-run deficit looked mighty big until the Engineer sluggers went to work. Gayle Lowery led the pack with three hits out of four times at bat and the rest of the team followed close behind. They were able to collect thirteen hits from Pinkstat, the Operations chucker.

Yarnell took over the Engineers' mound in the second inning and held the opponents to two hits and one more run.

greater part of the 75,000 acres logged off all over again.

"Give the trees time," he said. Time --and no fire."

No Sun---

"Once upon a time," said Billy Entwistle, "our summers here were all fires and no sun. In the summers of the 1870's and the 1880's, when I was a boy and a young logger, the people of Western Washington seldom saw the sun on the Fourth of July--or on any other summer day. All summer long hundreds of forest fires kept burning. In the heaviest rain they would smoulder, and the smoke would die down. Rainy spell over, we'd have the twilight of smoke again."

"Was it the Indians who burned the forests all the summers?" asked one of the Cubs. "I heard at school the Indians burned the forests to make better hunting grounds."

"You heard something wrong, son," said Billy Entwistle. The Indians did not set the fires that hid the summer sun in those times and killed so many of the lowland forests, which had the biggest and best trees of all. The Indians had been here for at least ten thousand years, the scientists declare, before the 1870's, when the great summer burnings began. Prospectors, ranchers, stockmen, homesteaders, hunters, all white, fired the forests to clear them out for their own purposes.

"No one dreamed that timber could ever become scarce. Of all things trees were the cheapest. White men burned wonderful forests just to make trails for easier travel. Many traveled the waterways by boat and canoe, camping overnight on the beaches. If their beach fires started forest fires, no one was concerned.

"Let 'm burn," they said. "fires do no harm. Too many trees anyway."

First Warden---

It seemed a long way back even to me, and to the Cubs a time much farther away -- the 1870's. Billy Entwistle is now 85. His father was a California 49er who found no gold and came to Puget Sound as a soldier under General George Brinton McClellan in the Indian wars of the early 1850's. Billy was born in the region in 1864. By 1876 he was greasing skids for a bullteam logging show. In 1906 he was working for forest fire prevention, posting trail signs that simply ordered "No Fire." In 1908 he became the first official fire warden of the Pacific Northwest.

Retired from active fire-fighting, Billy Entwistle still likes to go to the woods with the youngsters and tell them interesting facts of forest life.

So there we sat and listened to history of the old days in the timber, and I thought how they were not old days, after all, here was this log of a tree that was a windfall in the logging of 25 years ago, 1200 years of age. Yet our native Indians could look ten thousand years back beyond the tree in their own history in the forest region.
