Blood-Stained Mud

"His growing position in the House makes him valuable as a Congressman," says the Capital Journal of the Play-Boy Congressman from the First Congressional district.

He is the thirty-second member of the House Armed Services committee. Seniority determines rank on the committee and our Playboy outranks only a representative from Pennsylvania and the voteless one from Hawaii. He has been in Congress two terms and at his rate of expansion, mathematically, if he does not explode with conceit, which is most likely, he will be chairman of the committee in sixty-four years.

Two terms in Congress but time enough for him to break every promise that he made to the folks of his district, with the result that the Farmers Union, the Grange, the CIO and the AFL, in fact all the folks have tabulated Ring. the Play-Boy's record and all organizations that do make endorsements have endorsed his opponent Roy R. Hewitt.

Play-Boy Norblad made a junket around the world at the tax-payers expense as a member of the Armed Services committee, spent a couple of days being entertained by the Brass in Korea. He either had too much fun or lacked the ability to see and understand that what agricultural South Korea needs was soil fertility and know how. He is quoted by the press and radio with having made the following stupid statement:

"The administration wanted to send them fertilitzer and farm equipment instead of guns; We took the position there was no sense sending material like that to provide a juicy plum for the communists to seize." All military technicians know that food, clothing and high morale are just as essential to a nation's defense as guns and ammunition.

Communism germinates and grows in the debris of ignorance, poverty and disease. The Koreans are eighty-five percent illiterate, poor beyond the power of an American to imagine, and crowded down with infectious, contagious and degenerative diseases. In this small world no one is safe when there is a spot on it where such conditions exist.

The cure for Communism is to remove the debris in which it grows.

Fertilizer and rich well cultivated soil produces a high standard of living which makes possible education and the elimination of disease. But says the Capital Journal:

Some question has been raised since the political campaign started about his vote in January on Korea. He voted at the time against economic aid to Korea if such economic aid were not supplemented with arms aid."

Thus the Capital Journal trying to again foist him on the folks it confesses his guilt. The vote against $60 million aid to Korea was 191 FOR and 192 AGAINST. Walter Norblad cast the deciding vote against the aid sons to defend them.
