Red-Blooded Sports 'Rough it' For Elk

by JEAN ROBERTS

More red-blooded hunters have departed for grounds east of the mountains, as elk season draws toward a close in that part of the state. Resigned to cope with camp hardships for a week or more, Ercill Wilson, Ray Roberts, Bill Bickett of Elkhorn, and Buddy Newsome of Mill City, left over the weekend a week ago for the Sumpter area to pursue game.

Hunters, rugged individuals, scoff at the hardship of cooking over a smoking campfire in icy weather, sleeping on the hard ground, stumbling around in the dark, not to mention "packing out" game from a rough country after a kill.

Well might the modern hunter mock at inconveniences as he departs with a truck, jeep and pickup, which will practically eliminate any work or effort in event of a successful hunt.

While the little woman at home shudders over the discomforts endured by a brave hunter husband, he stirs the breakfast eggs over a small portable camp stove, which has practically replaced the smoking campfire.

Not exactly modern but efficiently used to camouflage a hard ground is straw. Baled for easy transportation it approximates the comforts of home when scattered under a sleeping bag inside a tent.

For freezing weather most hunters are well equipped with wool underclothes, wool socks, wool shirts,

Toy Dishwasher Works Just Like Mother's

This pretty model is showing off the Jet-Tower, Jr. automatic dishwasher, a plastic miniature of the new Youngstown Kitchens Electric Dishwasher. Originally designed as a display and demonstration device, it is also being made available as a toy. The miniature actually operates, washing tiny plastic dishes racked in two wire baskets. The jet tower, a chrome tube which extends through the center of the tub, spins and throws water on the dishes. Water is furnished by a hose connected to a faucet. Unit is 10 inches high and has a plexiglass lid.

Mountain States Pays Taxes Prior To Nov. 16

Total property taxes levied against Mountain States Power company in Oregon for the 1950-1951 period have been paid prior to November 16th, according to K. J. Kubas, treasurer for the utility.

The taxes for this period amounted to $624,313.69 and cover both the Willamette and Coos Bay operating divisions of the company. In addition to the property taxes, Kubas states that other taxes applicable to the company's Oregon operations for the year 1950 will amount to $304,544.55, a total for all taxes of $928,858.24.

Kubas said that property taxes paid by the power company in the Willamette division for the period 1950-51 amounted to $473,962.49, 20% higher than the amount paid by the company last year, and an increase of 191% over taxes for a similar period five years ago.

This year's payment of Oregon property taxes by counties amounted to $162,944.23 in Linn, $46,632.36 in Benton, $108,740.19 in Lane, $24,759.00 in Lincoln, $29,849.84 in Marion, $44,186.69 in Polk, $56,785.03 in Tillamook, and $150,351.20 in Coos county.
