HAVE A BETTER KITCHEN

Let's assume you're one of the lucky housewives with a new automatic dishwasher. You'll find it to be a major labor-saving device, taking most of the work out of that three-times-a-day chore and washing the dishes more hygienically than you can by hand.

Read the instruction book and follow it, especially as regard to the amount of detergent to be used. This may require some experimenting on your part, for how much you use depends largely upon the degree of water hardness. Excessively hard water frequently leaves water spots which are annoying but annoying and can be removed easily by rinsing with a towel. Incidentally, not all detergents are suitable for the dishwasher. Use only detergents recommended by the dishwasher manufacturer.

Since one of the basic requirements for good dishwashing is plenty of hot water, the best dishwashers are equipped with a booster-heater built in assure delivery of hot water. This can help by making sure that the normal household water supply is piping hot.

"SMALL BUSINESS"

By G. WILSON HARDER

The right to give statehood to Alaska will be bitter. The affairs of Alaska, on the surface, seem to have little in common with national small business.

However, all retailers and newspaper publishers have a big stake in the outcome of the Alaskan statehood bill. The future of America's newspaper supplies and prices hinge on the action.

Newspaper publishing is practically monopolized by four American companies. They, in turn, apparently have understandings or interlocking ownership, with Canadian newspaper companies.

Newsprint is made from pulpwood. Alaska has millions of acres of unused pulpwood forests.

For years independent businessmen have tried to establish a newspaper industry in the territory, only to be blocked by bureaucratic directives in Washington.

Alaska is ruled under the Organic Act of 1919. This act provides that all resources are controlled by Washington bureaus.

Not a tree can be cut unless permission is given by Washington bureaucrats. For some unexplained reason, even in periods of critical newspaper shortages, the bureaucrats have refused any Alaskan tree being used for newspaper.

And, thereby, hangs a tale of continuous opposition to statehood for Alaska.

As a state, Alaska would take over control of its resources. Supplies of newspaper from Alaska would break the closely controlled price structure.

Thus, in Washington, even so simple a matter of giving statehood to Alaska becomes complex.

As one observer states, "It's difficult to take a deep breath in Washington. You inhale and some company reminds your taking in air which the monopoly believes it should own; you exhale and some bureau official reminds the interference with his prerogative of issuing hot air."

With the Internal Revenue Dept. figures and new ways to get ten dollars, strange things happen.

For example, ECA Bulletin No. 1832 states the Marshall Plan has given another $400,000 worth of tobacco—this time to French North Africa.

And Washington bureaus are working out a rubber allocation plan.

But we ship rubber to Communist China—2,000 tons in September through the port of San Francisco; equal to the entire 1949 rubber exports to Red China.
