MEHAMA

By JEAN ROBERTS

Restaurant owners have long known that hamburger, apple pie and vanilla ice cream, are as American as democracy. The present prohibitive price and scarcity of beef, however, is threatening the hamburger with extinction.

Customers at a lunch counter invariably ask what sandwiches are available—listen attentively to the entire list, and then as though making an earth-shaking decision order "a hamburger." The same performance is repeated on the apple pie and vanilla ice cream issue. These are nearly always ordered after various kinds have been named and after deep deliberation by the customer.

Though dealing with the public whose actions are repetitious, the restaurant business has its amusing points. Recently a woman tourist ordered a "burger with everything on it", in a Mehama eating establishment. She was praising the excellence of the sandwich when the cook turned around and in astonishment saw the hamburger itself, still on the grill.

At still another place a customer was surprised to find that he had mistakenly been given ice cream topping instead of meat sauce for a sandwich.

Adding to the list of humorous eating happenings is the Mehama man who orders a 5 cent cup of coffee. "Hardly any difference in amount", he says, and "It leaves more room for cream."

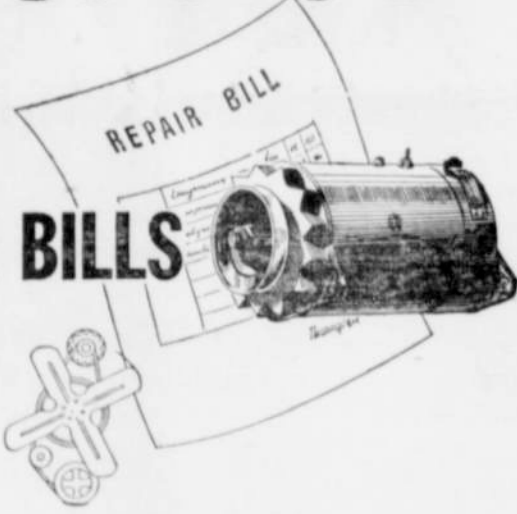

H. T. Caughey, John Jubb (transfer from grade school) and Henry Chaney, now a student at the University of Oregon. One vacancy, left because of the leaving of Miss Hope Baney, has, as yet, not been filled.

Verne Shaw and Glen Minten volunteered for and were admitted into the sturdy fraternity of the Mill City Firemen. Congratulations!
