Scrap From Farms Will Help In Production of Defense Equipment

WANTED: All the iron and steel scrap that is lying dormant on farms, such as obsolete, broken and worn out equipment and other accumulated material. It is urgently needed to maintain and increase the output of steel plants and foundries. More scrap means more steel!

If steel mills and foundries are to achieve any increase in production over the present high level, all available farm scrap must be started moving off the farms, says the Committee on Iron and Steel Scrap, of American Iron and Steel Institute.

Farmers everywhere can help toward more steel by scrapping their obsolete equipment and selling it promptly to a local scrap dealer, with other iron and steel scrap from their farms. It will be used to make steel for defense equipment and essential civilian items.

The need is urgent. Steel plants and foundries are now using record quantities of scrap. Every day in 1951 about 98,000 tons of purchased scrap are being used. Never before have such large quantities been required. Even so the need will increase, for steel capacity is scheduled to rise sharply over the next year or two. Farms have always been a good source of scrap and during the war when drives were conducted, agricultural areas yielded large tonnages of scrap to help win the conflict.

Farmers are asked to take their scrap now to town and sell it to scrap dealers. If the scrap is unusually bulky, preventing its easy transportation by the farmer, the scrap dealer can be called or arrangements can be made through the local farm agent to get it to the dealer.

Farms are one of the principal sources of the scrap that is required by steel companies and foundries. Auto wrecking yards, factories and railroads are among the other major sources.

More scrap from farms means more steel!

Out of the Woods

By JAMES STEVENS

Smokey Bear . . .

The Keep Oregon Green movement is mighty lucky indeed to have as its mainspring and loud speaker a veteran of such vigorous and varied talents as Clark Gable Wiesendanger. I hasten to add that the first two sections of that name is a tag of my own for "Our Al" to pay him back for putting me to work. It fits him some, too. For the Keep Oregon Green director has a show to put on before a couple of thousand 4-H club members, and in it he is to act the part of Smokey Bear.

Well, as Smokey Bear, what is Clark Gable Wiesendanger going to do and say when he steps out on the stage? That is the work I mean. Here I sit on a sunny Saturday morning in my boom-pod shack, squatting on a folded crazy quilt so old that grandpa used to tuck his whiskers under it, the three-bank Oliver Visible Typewriter—Model 1909 — quivering in its haywire reinforcements, while I try to think of a story for Oregon's Gable of forest fire prevention to speak and act for the 4-H.

That's how the KOG front man gets so much done—he has a way of persuading others to pitch in with him before they realize just what is happening to them. So here I am sweating and worrying in my boom-pod shack, when I ought to be out fishing.

Fighting Fire in Print . . .

Smokey Bear is steadily rising in the public view as an imaginary animal character of the forest that rivals Babe the Blue Ox. In the first place, Smokey was only a figment of some whiting man's imagination. Then words were set down about him. They outlined a character. An artist took the outline and began to make sketches, to visualize the character.

Then the trout on posters, in newspaper stories, and by radio transcriptions three years of promoting Smokey, and he began to catch on. The kids make a pet of him.

In the great outdoor pageant, "The Magic Tree," presented by the schools of Shelton as part of the Mason County Forest Festival this year, Smokey Bear the hero who laid the fire fiend low at the end.

Al Wiesendanger, always on the prowl for something more to add to the show. He saw the bear in the ranger's hat and logger's breeches come on top, while the kids yelled and thousands cheered. In similar ways Smokey is riding high, wide and handsome—before the public in all forest regions of the nation.

Of course, the writer and artist are only the starter in any job of this kind, like the sourdough starter that was kept and used in well-nigh every western household in the old days for

There are times when even the most devoted of brides feel a wild desire to wallop their beloved with the nearest available object. For fifteen minutes I had been patiently watching Jeff wander silently from room to room picking up articles and putting them down, rattling doorknobs, poking in cabinets. Finally, in as polite a tone as I could muster I inquired: "Looking for something?" "Just curious," he volunteered at last. "I wondered how many items we have around here made of copper. You know, with the silent butler, plant holders, trays, fireplace stuff, doorknobs, and I don't know what all, we have enough copper to start a small war."

"No, thank you," I put in firmly. "But that's exactly where copper is going," Jeff replied, "because without it our fighting men would simply have to give up! That red metal is vital to practically all modern weapons. Furthermore," he said, warming up to the subject, "we take so much copper in this country for peacetime uses that about one third of our requirements have to be imported."

It finally developed that Jeff had read an article describing a new government copper order effective March 1st which will prohibit the manufacture of more than three hundred items using copper and its alloys. What piqued Jeff's curiosity was that the article declared the order would affect every American. He pointed out the truth of this statement by listing a few of the prohibited items such as jewelry, dress ornaments, and decorative accessories used in homes. Even more important, the ban will reach many fields including building which depends heavily on copper for hardware, for roofing materials such as flashing, gutters and downspouts, and for pipe and tube in plumbing systems.

We discussed the situation at length and I forgot about earlier waxes toward mayhem. Only why did he act male-like and explain the picture after he poked into everything? I had thought he was bad after all!

ASTHMA

Don't let coughing, wheezing, recurring attacks of bronchial asthma ruin sleep and energy. Try MERVADOL, which works thru the blood to reach bronchial tubes and lungs. Usually helps nature quickly remove thick, sticky mucus. Thus alleviates coughing and aids freer breathing and better sleep. Get MERVADOL from druggist. Satisfaction or money back guaranteed.

making batches of bread. Production and distribution agencies then, have to go to work on a created character to make it popular.

In the case of Smokey Bear, production was by the joint advertising Council, the national organization of the advertising agencies for promotion of good causes through advertising mediums. Smokey's good cause of course, is forest fire prevention. His distributors are the U. S. Forest Service, the state foresters, and the "Keep Green" organizations. So Smokey is in the good cause of forest fire prevention, to the advertising Council what Babe was to Paul Bunyan.

"Hey, Bud . . ."

Well, on the old Oliver Visible I've written myself into a start for Al. Here's a stage opening to the 4-H audience. The fire fiend is found leaving a glowing campfire. He tosses away a lighted cigarette, then a still burning match. Smokey Bear sneaks up behind him, taps him gently on the shoulder, and says, "Hey, Bud." The fire fiend cringes, then turns to bluff it out.

Smokey: "Hey, Bud, that's not the right way to start a forest fire—Watch me—". You see, this is an unexpected attitude for Smokey to take. The kids will wonder. Most of them have heard that "Hey Bud," on Jack Benny's show. More wonder.

What next? Gosh all hemlock, I don't know. You see, this is what makes writing work, even for a peckerwood writing man. Sweat-sweat! What comes next Worry-worry. And what a day for fishing!

HAVE A BETTER KITCHEN

Eating in the kitchen is a time-honored American custom. Even the small kitchens in the thousands of new, moderate and low priced homes have failed to discourage this happy habit. In one way or another the family finds the space for a small table or a wall bar that admirably, if not always comfortably, serves the purpose.

If your kitchen is so small that it doesn't allow room for a kitchen dining table, perhaps this suggestion from the Youngstown Kitchens Planning Service will solve the problem.

Picture here is a simple wall bar that can be made to fit almost any space and requires little work for installation. All you need is a little wall space. It consists simply of a standard base cabinet top, complete with a coved stainless steel backsplash, attached to the wall with either metal or wooden supports.

With a little ingenuity and a couple of hinges, the bar can be made to fold down against the wall. Then when the bar isn't needed it practically disappears from the kitchen.

Base cabinet tops are available in a wide variety of colors and patterns to fit into the kitchen color scheme. A popular type of covering is called Cusheen. It is a vinyl plastic material that will withstand common kitchen acids and will give many, many years of wear. It is easy to keep clean and will do a great deal toward giving you a better kitchen.
