

Forest Products Market Report

The sawlog market in the Willamette Valley was steady during the week ending July 7, and demand was good. Demand for short barkie poles slackened, and sword ferns declined 3 cents a bunch. Other farm forest products were steady according to the weekly farm forest products market report, prepared by the OSC Extension Service from data supplied by State Farm Foresters and other information.

Douglas Fir Logs:

During the past week Willamette

Valley mills paid $30 to $41 a thousand board feet, mostly $35 to $38, for second growth Douglas fir sawlogs. Demand was good but buyers were choosy about quality. Eight foot logs, down to six inch diameter, continued in good demand at $15 to $18 a cord, or $35 to $38 a thousand. Old growth fir sawlogs were $32 to $58 a thousand, depending on grade. Peelers were $70 to $110.

Pulpwood:

The pulpwood market continued steady in the northern and central valley, and demand was good. Peeled spruce was $20 a cord, and Peeled Douglas fir, white fir, noble fir and hemlock were $19 a cord in 4 and 8 foot lengths down to 4 inch diameter. Unpeeled, these species brought $2 less. Offers for pulpwood in the southern valley have been withdrawn.

Poles and Piling:

Prices of Douglas fir poles and piling were generally unchanged at valley pole yards during the week. Peeled poles ranged from 9 cents to 45 cents a linear foot, depending on length. Barkies brought 9 cents to 43 cents a foot for lengths from 30 to 80 feet except in the southern valley, where there was no demand for barkies under 40 feet. Barkies were only 2 cents under peeled poles at one central valley yard. Piling prices ranged from 15 cents to 42 cents a foot for lengths from 20 to 100 feet.

Hardwood Logs:

Valley hardwood mills paid $30 to $40 a thousand for alder, $30 to $45 a thousand for ash and maple,

Grangers Picnic In Cascadia Park

Sunday, July 22, should prove a big day for all Grangers and their guests at the first annual Linn county grange picnic at Cascadia State Park. The park is located on the South Santiam highway fourteen miles east of Sweet Home.

The feature of the afternoon program will be a contest between all the subordinate granges. Prizes will be awarded on a basis of applause of the crowd. It is rumored that half a dozen different granges are on the verge of announcing themselves as winner of first prize.

Those coming early can enjoy a softball game. Dinner, a pot luck affair, will be at one. The state master and other state officers will be introduced at 2:00 p.m. Ending the order of day will be a sport program.

Grangers should bring their own table service. Coffee, cream, soft drink, and ice will be furnished.

The picnic is in charge of a county-wide group. Harry R. Willey chirmans and $24 to $28 for cottonwood.

Other Forest Products:

Car stakes were in limited demand at 30 to 35 cents each in the Eugene area. There was a limited demand for locust fence posts at 35 cents each and anchor posts at $2.50 each in the central valley. Sword fern dropped 3 cents a bunch to 16 cents. Dry cascara bark was 15 to 17 cents a pound.
