If Your Bathroom Light Casts Annoying Shadows and Glare...

DON'T think you have to center one fixture over the bathroom mirror. A lamp placed in this position casts shadows on the neck and chin, makes shaving and other close-seeing jobs difficult.

DO install two fluorescent or incandescent fixtures—one on each side of the mirror. For shadowless, glare-free light, center the lamps at 5 feet, 2 inches high and cover them with translucent shields.

Sneeze Weed Invades Oregon

Watch out for this enemy! It's ragweed, scourge of midwestern hay fever sufferers. It has shown up in Oregon. A drive to wipe it out before it gains a strong foothold in the state is being led by Oregon State college. Citizens can help by reporting the location of plants resembling ragweed and sending a sample to the OSC herbarium for identification. Ragweed grows 1 to 6 feet tall and has long branching spikes (top) bearing small greenish heads or berries.

New Crabgrass Killer

Only three simple steps are required to kill crabgrass with potassium cyanate. STEP No. 1—Carefully read and follow the directions found on each can of potassium cyanate crabgrass killer. STEP No. 2—Mix with water, in a pail or in the sprinkler or sprayer itself. STEP No. 3—Spray it on. If the crabgrass is bad, spray the whole lawn. If it appears only as individual plants or in small patches, just spot spray at close range, as shown (3).

A NEW chemical is available this year which shows promise of ending the home owner's long and discouraging battle against his worst lawn enemy—crabgrass. Its name is potassium cyanate and it works by simply mixing it with water and sprinkling or spraying it on your lawn.

After five years of testing and perfecting, potassium cyanate has been proven safe, economical, simple to use and—most important—95 to 100 per cent effective. It is non-toxic enough to be used without danger around children or pets. It causes no permanent injury or even lasting discoloration to most basic grasses. And it can be used effectively on either seedlings or mature crabgrass plants.

The cost of using potassium cyanate averages one dollar per 1200 square feet of lawn when applied to young seedling crabgrass in the spring (about twice as much is required in late summer, when the crabgrass plant is in its hardy prime). For those who have larger lawns the cost will be much less, as larger containers can be purchased at quite a substantial saving.

Although potassium cyanate can be applied at any time during the growing season, it is most effective when applied late in the summer, just before the crabgrass plant goes to seed. This is also the ideal time of the year to re-seed your lawn in those patches where crabgrass has been destroyed.

Potassium cyanate is not a trade name. It is the basic chemical in eleven different brands, each sold under a different brand name.
