MEHAMA

By JEAN ROBERTS

The Marion County chest x-ray mobile unit will be in Mehama Monday, July 30, 12 noon to 8 p.m. All adults are being reminded that they should take advantage of its visit.

Little Susan Coffman, age 7, who came home by bus from Seattle, Wash., last week, brought souvenirs to all members of her family—except her father. She explained that the item she'd chosen for him took a quarter and she didn't have a quarter, all her change was in dimes and nickels!

Many Mehama residents are faced with a water shortage. Many wells are nearly dry and springs low because of the prolonged dry spell. Several families have only enough water for cooking and drinking. The Sherman Wall family is completely without water and is hauling it from Stayton.

Hunting season may be several months away but several deer have been hanging in the cooler at Mehama recently. Special permits are obtained when wild game animals become destructive or too numerous. Two were killed in Bellins Mehama gardens, and two at John Neilsons. Still other farmers are complaining of damage to crops.

Mrs. Bud Johnson (Dorothy Mason) returned to Mehama last week after accompanying her husband to his base in Texas last month. She states that, "It is nice to see trees again," and plans staying in Mehama until Bud returns to the U. S. Bud, who was inducted into the armed services the first of the year, has been training in Texas and was sent to Germany. Woolen clothing was issued to him for overseas. Orders were then cancelled and the recruits had nothing but woolen garments to wear during a week of 112° temperature.

Two Stayton church denominations and Mehama layman have conducted Sunday service at Mehama this month in the absence of Dr. James Ferguson who is vacationing. Barney Kirsch, church elder, led services the first Sunday. George Sander of the Stayton Church of Christ was speaker the second Sunday. Three members of the Stayton Baptist church provided leadership for the services the following Sunday. Ross Poole, Stayton logger, was the speaker. Special music was furnished by Miss Poole.
