DETROIT—On an average day, at least one out of every three adults in the United States uses a passenger automobile for some essential purpose such as riding to work, conducting business or going shopping. This and some 20,000 other facts about how the American family car is used were revealed in a nation-wide survey recently conducted by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. It was learned that 59 million people over the age of 14 ride in automobiles on an average day. This represents more than half of the U. S. adult population. Nearly half of these individuals use a car in connection with earning a living during a typical day, while almost one-fourth of them go shopping by automobile. About 40 per cent of all rides taken in motor cars, and nearly one-half of the total passenger miles traveled, are for livelihood purposes, the survey showed. Shopping accounts for another 17 per cent of the rides and 11 per cent of the passenger mileage. These indications of America's growing dependence upon the family car for essential transportation are borne out by automobile and population statistics of the past 10 years. While our population has increased 13 per cent since 1940, car ownership has increased
