"DAVID AND BATHSHEBA" — The Story in Pictures — Part II

(1) God demonstrates his anger at King David's (GREGORY PECK) new-found love affair with the sirenous Bathsheba (SUSAN HAYWARD) by refusing to allow the Ark of the Covenant within the walls of Jerusalem. Nathan the Prophet (RAYMOND MASSEY) advises David to build a tabernacle to house the Ark outside the gates. (2) During this crisis, Bathsheba tells David she is with child.

David orders her husband, Uriah the Hittite (KIERON MOORE) back from the battlefield so that it can appear he had fathered the child. David entertains Uriah in his palace, but when his plan goes awry has him sent back to the front line where inevitably he is killed. (3) After the sacrifice of Uriah to the capture of Rabbah, David takes Bathsheba as his own lawful wife in an elaborate ceremony.

mony. (4) Famine strikes the country, and Nathan incites the populace to blame their misfortune on the sins of their King. To David he recites the parable of the rich man who usurped the poor man's ewe. With irony on his tongue, Nathan asks David to pass judgment on such a transgressor. Missing the point, David decides the rich man should die. You are that man, replies the Prophet. (To be continued)
