Star Recipes

As Told to Betsy Blake

Like any other American householder, beautiful JOAN FONTAINE, now starring in Paramount's "Something to Live For," likes variety in her Sunday chicken dinner. Tops on anybody's list is roast chicken in the French manner. That means no bothering with stuffing. All the busy cook need do is place a little margarine inside the bird, and it's ready for the oven. You'll really like its delicious unusual flavor. Here's the recipe:

ROAST CHICKEN. FRENCH STYLE

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| 1 3/4 lb. chicken | 1 clove garlic, crushed (optional) |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt | 1 tablespoon lemon juice, or |
| 1/4 teaspoon black pepper | 1/4 cup dry white wine |
| 4 tablespoons Blue Bonnet Margarine | 2 tablespoons water |
- Have butcher clean chicken for roasting. Sprinkle inside with salt and pepper. Place 2 tablespoons margarine inside chicken and crushed garlic, if used. Dot outside of chicken with remaining 2 tablespoons margarine and place breast side down in roasting pan. Combine lemon juice or dry white wine with water and pour gently over chicken. Cover with brown paper and roast in moderate oven (350° F.), allowing 30 minutes per pound. Baste occasionally (about every 15-20 minutes) with 1 tablespoon water. Remove paring during last 20 minutes of cooking to brown chicken. Serve on platter with side dish of gravy. Serves 4.
- Gravy: Combine pan juices with 1/2 teaspoon tomato paste and 1/4 cup water, and heat slowly.
