The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Farbay, Ph.D.

The number of possible variations in the children of one single home is infinite. No two children are ever alike—not even identical twins. There may be various degrees of outward resemblance, but still their individual features are far from being alike, as fingerprints reveal. Internally, there are vast differences, such as digestion, respiration, etc. It is considered biologically impossible for any two people ever to be alike in all points.

IDANHA

By RUTH JOHNSON
Mr. and Mrs. Vern Alvin left Saturday, December 29th by plane from Portland, bound for Los Angeles. They plan on attending the Rose Bowl game. They will spend the rest of their vacation in the sunny south visiting relatives and soaking in sunshine. Mr. Alvin is manager of the Idanha Veneer Co. of Idanha.

"Another Flag to Be Proud Of!"

Exhibiting the Treasury Defense Bond Flag, which is being awarded to cities that qualify for special distinction in the drive now under way, are First Lieut. Henry Alfred Comiskey, left, and Vernon L. Clark, national director of the United States Savings Bonds Division. Lieut. Comiskey was the first Marine in the Korean war to win the Congressional Medal of Honor, which was presented to him recently by President Truman, at a special ceremony in the White House.

On Mom's Night Out, Dad Does Laundry

Mom steps out to the movies with a girl friend and leaves Dad to his game with the boys. He doesn't mind doing the laundry between hands when he has automatic equipment.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—Dad is gradually taking over the home laundry labors in America. What's more, he seems to like it.

Recent surveys of homes having both automatic washers and dryers reveal Dad does the laundry more than half the time in many homes. In almost all of them he does it occasionally. Similarly, a check of Laundrettes disclosed that hobbies make up one third of all patrons. The surveys show beyond a doubt that it isn't masculine generosity but man's hankering to tinker with mechanical gadgets that's behind this evolution. Right from the start when automatic washers were first marketed 14 years ago, Mom literally had to shove Dad aside to get her work done. But frequently he insisted on doing the washing and has been stuck with it ever since.

Now it's getting worse. The survey results in homes that have both automatic washers and dryers point to an even greater shift toward "wifeless washdays." In 95 per cent of the homes hubby does a full wash at least once a month. In 22 per cent of the homes he's a laundry lover 75 per cent of the time.

Dad's role in home laundry is bound to grow as the flood of dryers being built now and planned for tomorrow swamp the market. So far the automatic dryer business hasn't even seen infancy.

Judson S. Sayre, general manager of Bendix Home Appliances, the pioneers in automatic home laundering, points out that only two per cent of American homes have dryers now. But in five years, he predicts, at least two out of three homes with automatic washers (there are 6,000,000 of them) will have dryers, too.

Dryers are more popular than even the automatic washers they complement. Three out of four women who have both, if asked to choose between one or the other, would prefer to lose the washer.

Those same surveys show that Monday is no longer washday in homes with dryers. Washing is done nearly every day or whenever there is a load for the washer. Drying is done immediately.

In a good many cases, Mom steps out—to a movie, club meeting or church social—while Dad settles down with a book, television, or a game with the boys. Incidentally he does the laundry, too, merely by flipping a dial or two.
