Homemaker's Quiz On O.P.S. Ceiling

Q. I leave my car in a parking lot while working downtown. The owner has just told me that from now on I either have all my car services done in his shop or pay a higher monthly parking rate. Is that legal? R. C., Albany.

A. No. Unless the proprietor made this condition in the base pricing period, December 19, 1950 to Jan. 21, 1951, he can't charge you more now.

Q. I'm thinking of buying a cultivator from a neighboring farmer. Is there a ceiling price on it? G. R., Pendleton.

A. Yes, there is. He can charge you 85 percent of the factory base price if it's not more than two years old. Otherwise, the ceiling price is 70 percent of the base price.

Q. Are men's wool suits and overcoats under price control? B. L., Oregon City.

A. Yes. You'll find the clothing dealer has tagged every suit or every rack with the selling price. This price must be at or below the ceiling price. Look for the sign reading: "The prices of merchandise in this store are no higher than the OPS ceiling prices of the articles."
