N. Santiam Fishing Now Within Law

Under the new winter fishing regulations recently set by the game commission anglers can fish the Santiam, Molalla, Calapooya, and main Willamette rivers for trout, jack salmon, steelhead, and salmon. Bag limit is two fish 12 inches or over per day and 4 fish in possession or in seven consecutive days. The 1952 winter fishing regulations cease April 19 with the opening of trout season and take effect again next October 13.

Winter fishing deadlines for the Willamette valley streams specified are as follows: All the main Santiam river is open, North Fork Santiam is open up to the bridge at Gates, South Fork Santiam is open up to Foster, Calapooya river is open up to Dollar camp, and the Molalla river is open up to the North Fork. Upstream deadline for the main Willamette river is the mouth of the Calapooya river. Only the Willamette and its tributaries below Oregon City falls were open to winter angling under last year's regulations.

Apologies have been sent to St. Paul high school as a result of a series of incidents which happened during and after the recent game of basketball which was played on the local floor and which the Timberwolves handily won. Mill City was definitely in the wrong so far as the said incidents were charged to us, but various witnesses have said that the St. Paul players and spectators were not entirely pure and were not, entirely to blame for this series of events that culminated in the vociferous condemnation of the referees as such by various fans.

Tuesday night the Gates Pirates won a hard-fought game with the local green-clad crew on the cracker-box floor at Gates. It was an untimely loss for the Timberwolves as they dropped into second place in league standings as Sublimity beat Jefferson on their home floor. I wish I had a pair of bright green socks to go with a black leather jacket like a certain basketball player we all know. Think it'd score a basket for me?

"The Bowery Champs" was the name of the film which was shown to the students of Mill City high school Wednesday afternoon in the monthly assembly. The picture was presented by the freshman class as their turn to entertain came up.

Thursday night was "Play Night" in the local high school gym as the Girls Athletic Association organized the program as a means of getting out of the red. Volleyball, square dancing, and kangaroo soccer were among the games played in this successful venture.

Honor Society members were announced in the student body meeting held Wednesday. The Student Council has voted in favor of purchasing pins as awards for those who qualify for the society scholastically. About twenty or twenty-five students were named.

Out of the Woods

By JAMES STEVENS

A Great and Good Logger...

Back in 1907 I was out on my own and traveling free. I wish the luck of the road had taken me then to the Tongue River country in the Big Horn Mountains of Wyoming. For I might have found a job in the woods up there, being handy with horses, fair with an ax and fast on my feet. And now I could boast that once in the old days I "set in" for Bill Dyehe. He was the boss logger on Tongue River in 1907 and one of the best of all his powerful Western tribe.

William K. Dyehe dwells today in Klamath Falls, retired and full of years. Walt McCulloch, who knows all the oldtime king loggers of Oregon, thinks that Bill Dyehe is likely the "firstest" of them all, because of his inventions. I've heard other authorities second the motion. I've never met Mr. Dyehe, but I will if I live and he does.

Rough Rider...

Where Bill Dyehe and I might have met well before 1907 was in Southern Idaho. For a spell there my pappy was a king snipe on the PIN—that is, a section boss on the Pacific & Idaho Northern Railroad. The place was up Weiser River Canyon, nigh Middle Valley—now, alas, "Midvale." Young Bill Dyehe wound up there, helping to build the PIN, after he was discharged from service in the War with Spain.

In that war of the old, old days Bill was a Rough Rider under the mighty Roosevelt, fighting Theodore. His discharge money was not enough to buy a ticket west of North Dakota, What with the yellow jack and embalmment—apart from an occasional Spanish bullet—a discharged veteran of that old-style war considered himself lucky to get out of the uniform alive—as indeed he was. He may have dreamed of a pension but he looked for no bonus or college education or home loan as reward for toting a government issue gun at soldier's pay.

So the young ex Rough Rider was dumped from a train in North Dakota when he was down to his last two dimes and left to be a free man in a free world. The season was winter. The temperature was 20 below. But a man could "ship out" to be a construction hand on the new branch railroad that was building from the Oregon Short Line in Idaho. Bill

Gates high school's champion B league scorer, Marlin Cole, who has been building a record of points scored to a total of 381 for an average of nearly 30 points for each game played. The 6-ft. 1-in. center was in action last Tuesday night when Gates defeated Mill City 65 to 53 on their home floor. Cole is said to be the greatest scorer in the league circuit history. WOOL TEXTILES in rich colors, reflecting the growing influence of the California fashion market, take the Spring fashion spotlight from wool to cashmere. This is the case in the new "Wool in California" colors. The Sunshine State's designers show their influence, too, in the coat's imaginative styling, emphasized in the deep shawl collar and rounded cutaway lines.

Dyehe tightened his belt and took shipment.

After piling up a stake as a dirt-moving team hand on the building of the PIN, the Rough Rider hopped a freight on west, lighting at Bridal Veil, Oregon.

First Skyline?...

Bill Dyehe was a man born to log. He took a job in the sawmill at Bridal Veil but it was the logging operation, bossed by Bob Barr, that attracted him. The outfit was just starting to use steam in that year of old, 1899. The first machine was a spool donkey so small that water to fill its pipes was packed to the works—in saddlebags!

Bob Barr was a great logging chief, according to Bill Dyehe, and deserves to have his memory marked as one of the first to invent and rig up a skyline system—if not the first. It was a trolley with grab hooks that carried a big log at a trip over a deep canyon. Working into a blacksmith helper's job, young Dyehe had a hand in the trials and errors that arrived at a successful skyline operation.

Many, many are the stories, all vital stuff of the true history of Western logging, that follow in the record of Bill Dyehe's logging life. I do wish he would write it, but as he has written his Tongue River, Wyoming, adventure. Maybe Walt McCulloch can persuade him to do it. Here, indeed, would be real writing with the bark on, conk free and peeler grade. Would it make the grammar girls shudder? That'd be the added attraction.
