GOOD HEALTH

1. ARE FAT PEOPLE WELL NOURISHED?

2. WHAT WILL YOUR DOCTOR CHARGE?

3. HAVE YOU -- OR ARE YOU -- A PAIN IN THE NECK?

Answer to Question No. 1: Overweight is the commonest form of malnutrition. Cravings due to the lack of important elements in the diet, along with emotional maladjustment, lead to much of the over-eating that largely accounts for an estimated thirty million in this country being at least 10 per cent overweight. A doctor can help the fat person find a diet that is both thinning and nourishing, and will increase his chances to keep well. Fat people are more susceptible to disease than those of normal weight.

Answer to Question No. 2: While it is harder to set prices on medical services than on some other services and commodities, many doctors are finding that patients prefer to discuss charges in advance, and know, for example, how much of the bill will be due to x-rays, office visits, electrocardiograph, and so on.

Answer to Question No. 3: The figurative "pain in the neck" may be dispelled by inducing the in-laws to go home, or taking a holiday from the job. Physical pain in the neck may result from exposure to drafts, and will yield to massage or heat. Some neck pains are caused by disease in other parts of the body. If neck pain persists, consult your doctor.
